MILLIONAIRE HURT IN FATAL AUTO CRASH

INDIANAPOLIS, May 30.—One man killed, two, one of them "Al" Greiner, millionaire driver of a car, seriously injured, are the casualties thus far in the 500-mile auto race here. Several other accidents were only averted by the coolness and daring of the drivers.

MILLIONAIRE DEFIED "HOODOO."

The dead man is S. P. Dickson of Chicago. He was in Greiner's car as mechanician when the "hoodooed" Amplex car which the millionaire was driving failed to take the high-banked turn in the thirteenth round and dashed to the top of the embankment, over which it plunged.

Greiner, who defied the "hoodoo" and drove it after the refusal of his regular driver, Jones, to drive it as a result of the accident yesterday, is in serious condition. Dickson was killed instantly.

Almost from the start of the race spectators in the grandstand were thrilled by a succession of mishaps to drivers, mechanicians or machines. The latter dashing along at an almost uniform rate of 75 miles an hour seemed almost inferal creatures.

There were a dozen narrow escapes from what seemed to the spectators almost certain fatal accidents. Time and time the sight of Greiner's car toppling over the embankment, and quickly the news that Dickson had been killed and the millionaire driver badly hurt. Hardly had the excitement over this calmed down, before there was another scramble as the Knox swept directly in front of the grandstand.

Spectators Faced Horror.

While coming down the streets in the fortieth round, Louis Disbrow's car, the Pope-Hartford No. 5, skidded and turned completely around. Disbrow jumped out and escaped injury, but before the car could be shoved from the track the third Tetsaff to Losier 84 smashed into it, wrecking both cars so badly that they were out of the race. Tetsaff escaped injury, but his mechanician, Dave Lewis, was buried high in the air in view of the 50,000 people in the grandstand, and scores of women fainted while men averted their eyes to avoid the sight of what it seemed was to be another fatality. Lewis, however, escaped with a broken leg and a dislocated collarbone.

There were several minor accidents in front of the grandstand, Joe Jagersberger, the "Speed King," who was crowned to-day before the race, was rounding the turn one of the tires flew off. It looked as if nothing could save the car, but by an exhibition of gigantic strength Burman held it together and drove it on the rim for the rest of the lap. The feed tire bounded along the track for 500 yards and then at a turn bounced over the cement wall and into one of the stands. No one was hurt.

In attempting to dodge Jagersberger's car, Lieffe, in Appegon 35, skidded across the track, and his car overturned as it hit the cement wall. A bystander was struck, but not seriously hurt. The tangle caused a thrill of horror to pass over the grandstand, but no one was badly hurt. Knight's Westcott 7 was hit by Appenon 34 in the smashup and is out of the race. A bad collision occurred immediately in front of the grandstand when Jagersberger's No. 1 car, No. 8 tried to stop at his pit, after passing the judges' stand. The car slipped and failed to stop. Maxwell, mechanician, fell from the machine and the rear wheels ran over him, without inflicting serious injuries.

Millionaire Loses Lead.

At the end of 210 miles Harroun's No. 32 was still in the lead. The car is being driven at world's record speed, the present time being less than one second behind the speedway record for 200 miles.

Bruce Brown, the New York millionaire, is second to the Marmon, with Mulford third. Brown held the lead up to the 160th mile, when Harroun passes him Time, 2:49:58, continuing the same average of 73½ miles an hour.

At the end of the 200th mile the leaders were Harroun in his Marmon, De Palma second and the Lozier third. Time—2:42:16.

At the end of 270 miles Harroun led, with De Palma second and the third place had been snatched away from Mulford by Bruce-Brown in his Fiat. The time was 3:40:08. At the end of the 250th mile Harroun was five minutes ahead of the world's record for that distance, the time being 3:21.

At the end of the 300th mile only twenty-five of the original forty cars were still in the race. Of these Harroun was leading by a very narrow margin, Mulford in the Lozier, second, and Bruce-Brown in the Fiat third.

Time for 300 miles, 4:03:25.

This was a new speedway record and within eight minutes of the world's straightaway record.

MISS CALDWELL, BRIDE-TO BE IN "SPA" ROMANCE

"BACH" DINNER TO BRIDE-TO-BE

Former girl associates of Miss Frances Caldwell at Thompson's Spa for ten years, give her a "bachelor" dinner to-night at the Hotel Victoria, in honor of her coming marriage to Cecil Stuetzel, Jr., Boston building inspector.

An attempt was made to keep the event almost romantic quiet, even when Miss Caldwell quit work a week ago and young Mr. Stuetzel was not noticed around for his usual shortcake, the girls began to suspect something. They made an investigation and the bachelor repast is the result.

Stuetzel lives at No. 743 Parker street, Roxbury. The actual date upon which the ceremony will be performed has not yet been fixed, but to her very intimate friends Miss Caldwell has confided the information that during the last week in June she will become Mrs. Stuetzel.

The bride to be is at the home of her mother, No. 60 Idaho street, Mattapan, until the eventful day arrives. She has told her friends that she wishes to take a month's course in housekeeping. The utmost secrecy is being maintained by members of the family. Mr. Stuetzel has built a very pretty home for his bride at Readville.

Miss Caldwell will be married by the Rev. Dr. Brooks of the Orthodox Church at Dorchester, and although the wedding will be a quiet affair it is understood that her sister Ruth will be bridesmaid.

Miss Caldwell became acquainted with Mr. Stuetzel a little over a year ago, when the latter, having long admired the sparkling dark eyes of the pretty girl who waited on him, at last sought an introduction. Six months ago she said "Yes."

Miss Caldwell's father is employed by O. H. Bent & Co. of Milton, and her brother Volney Caldwell is a clerk at the City Hall.

PRISONER HELD AS BURGLAR SUSPECT

In the person of Peter Kloulenous, arrested to-day on D street, South Boston, the police believe they have the man responsible for numerous burglaries in South Boston, and in Brockton. An automatic magazine revolver, a burglar's mask, and a pocket flash light were found on his person. The arrest was made by Patrolmen Thomas Mason. He was approached by a man who pointed to Kloulenous, some distance away. "There is a man in the Brockton police station," the man told the officer. "Look out when you go to the station, he may escape." Officer Mason put him under arrest. The man reached for his big pocket, but Mason slipped the handcuffs on him.

LORIMER WILL BE CALLED TO TESTIFY

WASHINGTON, May 30.—For the first time since the charges were brought against Senator Lorimer of Illinois that Senator is to be called before the committee which investigates the scandal and is to be required to testify under oath as to the things that happened in connection with his election. It was learned to-day that the decision to summon Lorimer and compel him to give sworn testimony has been reached by those Senators who are pushing the second investigation.

ORATION BY TAFT IN NATIONAL CEMETERY

WASHINGTON, May 30.—President Taft delivered the Memorial Day oration at Arlington National Cemetery to-day in the presence of an immense crowd of G. A. R. veterans and their friends. The exercises came as the culmination to the observance of the day here and followed the decoration of the graves of Union veterans in the various cemeteries.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, May 30.—Cliff Curtis and Grover Cleveland Alexander the Great were the opposing pitchers in this afternoon's game between the Phillies and Rustlers.

The morning battle was a dandy for nine innings, during which neither team was able to score. The Phillies finally got busy in the tenth and tallied three times, while the Rustlers were blanked.

Tenney's time wanted revenge for this defeat, and the manager thought Curtis was the boy who could turn the trick.

President Russell of the Boston club said this noon that Manager Doolin had presented some trades to Tenney, but came out with a flat denial that either Raiffen or Graham was concerned in them.

"We have two good catchers," he said, "and are certainly not going to get rid of either of them unless we get an equally good one in exchange, and we couldn't land one from the Phillies because Doolin wouldn't trade himself."

Manager Doolin, of the Phillies, played this afternoon's game under protest, warning Umpire Finneran to that effect in the third inning. In that round Dootil fouled a ball, which went into the press box and was touched by one of the occupants. Finneran ruled that the ball had handed back from the front of the box into the field and tossed it to Curtis. Doolin wanted the umpire to put a new ball in play, but he refused and Rod protested.

ITALIA DEFEATED IN FIRST RACE

Pleasure Bay, South Boston, presented a pretty picture to-day, the occasion being the official opening of the yachting season which was marked by a number of races. The bay was filled with yachts and all kinds of craft, of which were decorated with the national colors, the owners of which entertained their friends on a lavish scale.

All day long the officers and members of the South Boston, Boston and Mosquito Yacht Clubs entertained visitors from other yacht clubs in their clubhouses on the Broadway, splashing the water and afforded turns the privilege of enjoying the races in the bay. The club quarters were decorated with red, white and blue bunting, interspersed here and there with yachting pennants.

Unfortunately there was very little wind for the yachts to show their speed, and the races proved to be mere drifting matches. The races were conducted by the Yacht Racing Association of Massachusetts and were open to all yachts. Ninety-six boats started, eight more than last year. All interest centered around the Italia, owned by George Lee, and the Amoret, owned by C. B. Wheelock, both of the Columbian Yacht Club of Marblehead.

In the twenty-five-foot class the Virginia, owned by C. L. Joy, champion of the Boston Yacht Club last season, was beaten by the Nutmeg, owned by A. C. Jones of the Boston Yacht Club.

In the Capte cut boats the Iris, champion cat boat of America last year, and owned by F. H. Crane of the Quincy Yacht Club, defeated nine of the best cat boats along the coast.

HIGGINSON NOT HURT BY CROPPER

A. Henry Higginson was thrown from his horse in a hurdle event at the Chestnut Hill Horse Show held by the Chestnut Hill Riding Club on its field in Brookline to-day in view of a large number of society men and women, but escaped with a few bruises and appeared none the worse for the accident.

Mrs. Higginson was among the spectators when he took a "cropper," but did not get excited nor rush to his side, instead she maintained aristocratic composure. Society was rather alarmed when it beheld Mr Higginson plunge over his horse's head, as though engaged in some warlike instead of equestrianism, and there was a sigh of relief when, after tripping inconsiderately a moment, as if stunned, Mr. Higginson picked himself up and remounted his horse, which had not entered after tripping over her rider.

Then Mr. Higginson proceeded to take the hurdle which had precipitated his mishap and going over it safely, flew over the fourth and last, completing the event. The event was class T3, and consisting of jumps over brush obstructions about four feet high. They mastered the same purpose in Building that a hedge would do in old England, where society "F" red coats follows foxes with horses and hounds.

Mr. Higginson is the son of Major Henry S. Higginson, the broker, rode his new thoroughbred white mare Margery Grey. There were four hurdles in the event. The horse took the first two a-flying. At the third she balked with an abruptness which shot Mr. Higginson over her head and on his back and the sod ground so soft that the peril of the plunge was very much minimized.

ROME AWAITS FLYING RACERS

ROME, May 30.—Rome made preparations to-day to welcome the aviators in the Paris-to-Turin race. Thousands of spectators gathered early in the morning alert for the first glimpse of the coming aeroplanes.

It was expected that M. Garros, who was leading in the race, would circle over both the Vatican and the Quirinal before alighting.

Garros arrived at Pisa during the morning from Nice and proceeded upon his way, declaring that he would reach Rome within two hours. When this word was received here people began to flock to the roofs of buildings. Hundreds of attaches of the Vatican ascended to the dome of St. Peter's.

All of the eminences of Rome's seven hills were crowded by the vast army of spectators. Immediately after word was received that Garros was making his way toward Rome, aviators came from Non that Frey had arrived there.

TRAIN CRASH IN SOUTH STATION

Much excitement was caused in the South Station at 7.30 a. m. to-day, when a train of empty passenger cars knocked the bumper away and crashed through the gate into the main passenger section of the station where there was a large crowd of men, women and children waiting to take early trains out of the city.

Warning shouts came from the engineer on the locomotive in the rear of the three cars. He found that the air brake refused to work and anticipated what would happen.

There was a frenzy scurrying among the waiting throng. Women and children screaming through the big structure. There was a crash, and a passenger car shot through its length through the gate, smashing it to kindling and filling the place for some distance with the debris.

Fortunately, the people who had been directly in front of the gate had time to get away, and there was no one injured.

The train was the 6.57 for Dedham and Roxbury. It was backing in, empty. The air pipes between the engine and third cars became clogged in some way. When the engineer closed the throttle and turned on the air the wheels continued to turn. There was nothing he could do.

The rear car struck the bunting post at the end of the track, knocked off the heavy steel rails that held it as though they had been toothpicks, rolled across the narrow stretch of boarding and struck the gates.

The heavy gate and portions of the fence were hurled out into the Broad Walk. The rear wheels of the car passed upon the cement walk and were rolling free, but the forward wheels broke through the stretch of boarding inside the gate and brought the train to a stop. This fact alone kept the heavy cars from plunging across the cement into the waiting room.

It took the train men and employes at the South Station nearly an hour to clean up the wreckage and back the car upon the track.

HONEST, OLD JOHN HARVARD REALLY LOOKED LIKE THIS

Conciliatory note to undergraduates and alumni, though the explanation doesn't go far Yale—please remember that Cartoonist Moynahan drew from an English professor's verbal description.

JOHN HARVARD'S SECRET IS OUT

Undergraduate sympathy for John Harvard, sometime renowned as the founder of an educational institution at the seat of learning in Cambridge, just across the Charles river from Boston, has been misplaced for to, these many years.

John was not the thin, consumptive looking person, his brow sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought, as he is depicted in his bronze statue in front of Memorial Hall, Cambridge.

All these years harvard "grinds" have been figuratively bowing down before and worshipping this statue—when they were not painting it some hideous color—in the belief that John was one of them, a studious and intellectual person when he was an undergraduate at Emanuel College, Oxford, England, while the "busker" of Harvard have scorned and flouted the counterfeit presentment of John in the bestial as evidenced by the statue that he never could "make the team."

A Voice from England.

"All wrong," says Professor G. F. Searle, instructor of physics at Cambridge University, England, who is over in Cambridge, Mass., for a few days visit. Professor Searle was taken to see the statue of John Harvard, and gave a low gasp of horror.

"That isn't John Harvard," he exclaimed when he came to. "Then he said a few explanatory sentences in eloquent Oxford, which being translated liberally are:

"You've been bunked. John Harvard was not such a looking person. He was no blighter. The real John Harvard was a broke gent. When he was at college he was a roughneck. He weighed something like 190 to 200 clear, and was all beef, clear to the hoof. He could have made either the crew or the team, and would have been a terror to policemen in these days.

Ha-Ha from Yale.

"I fear me that Yale has been having the quiet but titillating laugh on you Harvard guys for these many years. Your Revered John was no consumptive. Far be it. He was strong enough to be a navvy, as we call a husky day laborer over here, England. His big stomach he was to have been enshrined in imperishable bronze as a 110-pounder and with a high, lofty brow and a high forehead, he never would have founded Harvard, take it from muh."

Professor Searle further explained the why of the John Harvard myth.

"Several years ago," he said, "Emanuel college decided to perpetuate the memory of John Harvard by placing his likeness on one of the stained glass windows of the chapel. England was scoured for a picture of Harvard, but none could be discovered. So the artist had to go by a description, or alleged description, of his person, and being a highbrow himself, used artistic license to portray John as one. Hence he painted him as a long, lean consumptive looking youth. Your statue was modeled from that stained glass window painting. Emanuel college tradition, however, shows that the real John Harvard was of big frame, healthy and strong and with no consumptive tendencies unless it were the consumptive of vast quantities of food and drink as per college diet in his day."

SCHOOLMASTER IN CHASE FOR THIEVES

Robert M. Rice, principal of the Williams Grammar School, Chelsea, gave chase to two young men who had entered the school building and had stolen $11 that they found in the clothing of two women teachers. He failed to catch them. The men entered room No. 35, one of the teachers' dressing rooms, and stole from the clothing of Miss Nellie Lynch of Mills. They then went to another teachers' dressing room, numbered 36, where a five-dollar bill was taken from the clothing of Miss Esther Samuels.

WHY 8-YEAR-OLD GIRL RAN AWAY

"I just wanted to see what it was like; I wasn't mad at anybody, but I just wanted to see what it was like," and that is the reason given to-day by little eight-year-old Anna Frost, who ran away from her Springfield home at No. 157 Florence street, after a day's wandering in a "big city" and a night in the Charles Street Home. When found by Patrolman Cash back in the Dudley Street terminal she was sitting on a bench munching a cookie which she had brought from home and clutching a paper bag containing one more cookie in her other hand. The policeman questioned her and at first she told him she was from Troy, but by the time they had reached the Charles Street Home she owned up that she was from Springfield. The Springfield police have been notified and will send for her to-day.

Wanted to See Sister.

She made a quaint little picture as she came very deliberately down the long hallway stairway of the Home to-day. Her soft dark hair was in two braids wound her neck and tied jauntily on top with a big red butterfly bow. She was quite pale under a sparse sprinkling of freckles, and her big brown eyes looked if you represented a thin little boy she with a nervously down mouth. She came across the floor bravely, but responded to all advances very slowly, but finally condescended to climb up in the superintendent's lap, and then there was better progress.

"No, I was not mad at anybody, but I wanted to go to Providence to see my little sister Katie, she's seven, she ran away to Troy a little while ago, and so I wanted to go too.

"Yes, I asked a friend of mine to come with me, her name is Annie Rose, but she couldn't come because her mother wouldn't let her." Anna had the grace to blush at the next question.

Made the "Cop" Laugh.

"No, my mother didn't let me either, didn't ask her. I just came. I got up and had my breakfast yesterday morning, and then I went upstairs and mamma had some money in a purse and I took it and took it and came away, just like I was going to school. But I walked to the depot, and on the way I met a cop and I told him I was going to Troy.

"He just laughed and said 'That's good,' and didn't arrest me at all. Then in the depot there was some black cars, and I got on one, and it was all full of men, and they was hollering and making an awful noise, and it made my head ache, and pretty soon another lady got on, and she hollered and made a fuss, too, and then they picked me up and put me out of the car. When the car stopped a lady said to me that this is Boston, and I thought it was going to be Troy, for that is where my sister went, and my brother Arthur, he's twelve, he went there too with another boy.

"There was a long pause when Anna was asked if she was glad she was going back to Springfield. "Yes, I am glad," came promptly.

"Well, what will your mamma say to you?"

Has a Nickel Left.

"Oh, she won't say nothing, but my sister Mary, she's my big sister, she will take me to the moving picture show. I have got a nickel left, and I can go to the pictures with it."

"Is that what you like best to do?"

"No, I like best to play with the mud pies, and when I grow up I'm always going to play all the time, except sometimes I'll sew some, because I like to sew. But I'm never going to get married. I don't want to and my mamma don't want me to. I'm just going to play and sew."

BURGESS MAKES COLLEGE FLIGHT

College birdmen resumed their aviation contests to-day at the Somerton Aviation Field when W. Starling Burgess, the Medford head aviator, and Harry N. Atwood of Lynn made a brilliant flight.

The two men climbed into a Burgess-Wright biplane at 8.30 and in a steady mile breeze began a flight that delighted the spectators and the two men in the machine. Atwood, a pupil of the Wright school at Dayton, O., piloted the machine. Other flights in the contest follow:

While making a trial flight in a Farman type glider, E. P. Bugbee of Tufts College fell a distance of twenty-two feet, the machine turning a double somersault before it struck the ground.

Machines from Volkmann and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology were the only ships seeking any prizes yesterday, and the number of points attained by each was about equal. E. W. Aumiller in the former and E. N. Fales in the latter were the aviators.

Harvard's contribution to the meet was a machine called "Groundhog No. 2." H. Allen, the chief aviator of Harvard's crew of five, made three trials, but the machine failed to leave the ground when drawn by a powerful automobile.

The following are the competitors in the meet:

Massachusetts Institute of Technology—E. N. Fales, F. W. Caldwell and H. L. Lehman.

Tufts College—E. P. Bugbee.

Swathmore—H. Blanchard.

Volkmann—C. H. Weiser, F. R. Lesits and C. K. Getchell.

Volkmann School—F. P. Warner, E. W. Lombard, D. Daring and P. Townsend.

Harvard University—H. Allen, M. C. Allen, E. C. Brown, J. H. Taylor and W. H. Cupen.

The officials are: Referee, A. A. Merrill; clerk of the course, R. M. Allen; assistant clerk, W. H. Capen; inspector, M. C. Allen; timers, A. W. Carpenter, C. K. Getchell; announcer, A. G. Waite; measurers, J. H. Taylor and H. Blumhard.

MINISTERS ARE TO PLAY BALL

Episcopal ministers of Boston will play baseball at the Bishop Lawrence Camp, Stanwood Point, Gloucester, Saturday afternoon, June 10.

Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, rector of Trinity Church, will pitch for one nine, and the Rev. Dr. E. S. Rousmaniere, rector of St. Paul's Church, will catch for the other nine.

Many well-known Episcopal ministers will take part in the game, among them being Dr. Elwood Worcester, rector of Emanuel Church; Rev. William T. Clarke, of the Church of the Ascension; Professor Henry S. Nash of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge; Rev. Max Kellner, of Cambridge, and Archdeacon Babcock. Bishop Lawrence will be present at the game.

Staunton H. King, in charge of Sailors' Haven, Charlestown, will umpire the game, and Rev. A. E. George will keep the score, provided he has enough paper and pencils.

The train will leave North Station at 12.40 p. m. for West Gloucester and will carry the clerical fans. The camp is some distance from the station and clergymen will be met at the station by one of the "cloth" who has the matter in charge.

TESTING NEW AUTO STREET SWEEPER

An auto sweeper is the latest novelty which the Public Works Department proposes to install in Boston if the trial of one of the machines in the next few days proves successful on the city's streets. Each machine is operated by two men, one steers the car and the other, seated in the rear, manipulates the sweeper, which is equipped with a powerful steel brush. The brush gathers up the dirt and rubbish in the street, and another device on the machine takes the sweepings up and throws them into a large tank in the body of the auto and thus disposes of them.

MARTIAL LAW IN HONDURAS

CELBA, Honduras, May 30.—Martial law has been proclaimed in Honduras, because of a rumored threatened invasion of this country from Salvador. CARUSO JESTS AT GIRL'S SUIT

LONDON, May 30.—Caruso was indignant when he was asked to-day about a threatened breach of promise proceedings by a Milan shopgirl for $50,000 damages.

"Yes," he said, "she may have fifty or sixty letters of mine written to her during three months. They are rather familiar in tone, but there is no promise of marriage in them. This is the fourth time she said she would do this.

"About two years ago I offered to engage this girl as a housekeeper, but she refused. That was when I was in Milan. After that I came here and while in London I received a dispatch from her saying:

"'I am ready to follow you; come and fetch me.'

"My answer was: 'I have no time because of my tour in England. After that our correspondence began. Two months later I thought: What are you doing? before the correspondence was an afternoon old. I proposed to her to meet me in Berlin. I said 'Come with some of your family.'

Very Ordinary People.

"I had sent her a lot of money, $9,000 francs. She came with her father and when I met those people I saw my mistake, because the people are very ordinary. She stayed five days in Berlin. I left for America. I gave her 2,000 marks.

"After that I wrote her a letter from Bremen, and said:

"'I am very sorry to tell you what I have got to say. Our correspondence was intimate. I cannot have a woman like you. If you are a good girl you will give me back my letters; I give you back yours. Because I cannot be married with anybody.

"I go not write any more. She continued to write about six or eight months. Last year when I went to Italy she came to Paris with her mother. The first thing her mother said to me was:

"Here Is My Daughter."

"'Here is my daughter. I do not want to know anything about her. I bring her here to you.'

"I said: 'Madam, I don't want your daughter. There is the door; go away with your daughter.'

"Then I said: 'I am a gentleman. I do not want you to think badly about me. I will write my lawyer to fix something for my letters.'

"I gave her 1,000 francs and they go away. After that my lawyer wrote to these people asking how much for the letters. They asked 25,000 francs. My lawyer said:

"This is ridiculous because you cannot do anything against Caruso by law, because the law protects him in this case. Perhaps if the request is a little less I will offer Caruso.'

"After that these people do not reply, but make a big scandal in Milan about the 1st or July of last year. After that I hear no more."

"Last January I received a letter from a lawyer in America who said he had the case of this Milan girl to go against me for breach of promise. I sent my lawyer to this lawyer. I do not receive any more about it."

WORK HORSES SEEN IN PARADE

The ninth annual parade of the Boston work horses was held to-day. There were 1,400 horses entered in the forty-one classes, and about five hundred prizes were awarded to horses and drivers. Five thousand people, including many horse fanciers of the Back Bay, saw the parade in and around the grandstand erected at the corner of Beacon street and Commonwealth avenue. The line started at 9:30, and was three hours in passing. It was estimated at five miles long and was easily the longest work-horse parade ever held in Boston.

All Kinds of Horses.

There were draft horses, heavy and dignified. There were smaller horses on the swift delivery teams. There were small horses from the smaller groceries. There were horses of every size and color. And there was a class of mules. In several of the teams, too, three rode cats or dogs, pets of the stables from which the horses came, and in two cases, small dogs rode on the backs of their equine chums. Every dog and cat in the parade received a prize from the Animal Rescue League.

Louis Bent, employed for thirty-eight years as a driver for the Jordan Marsh Company, was given a prize for long consecutive service. He has received a medal each year of the parade. This year he was awarded a silver one. Other drivers who had served long and faithfully with a single employer also received bronze medals.

Scully Team Winner.

The event of the day, and the one that attracted the most attention, was class 50 for four-horse teams. In this class there were three prizes. The first prize, the Lawrence gold medal, given by E. R. Lawrence, was awarded to the team put in by John T. Scully Foundation & Transportation Company. This team consisted of four magnificent grays. The driver, Michael Curran, received a bronze driver's badge as a "Veteran Driver." The second prize, a silver medal, went to the team of Hilton, Morrill & Company, driven by William Lane. Lane received a bronze medal as a veteran driver, and $5. The third prize of a bronze medal and $5 to the driver went to Hilton, Morrill & Company's team, driven by William Erskine, also a veteran driver.

Especial interest was attracted to the class of four-horse teams by the special prizes offered here for horses and drivers. This year, as last, the bridge for veteran drivers was awarded to George Fred Seamon, colored, employed by Shaw tuck & Jones.

Five Divisions for Old Horses.

In the classes from one to thirty, several first prizes were awarded in each class. Class thirty-one for singles, light horses, was won by George Fred Seamon driving a horse belonging to Shattuck & Jones. Class 32, wagon horses, middleweights, was won by James Heggarty, driving one of Jordan-Marsh's horses. William Vaughan, driving for George G. Fox Co., won the class for doubles, roadsters. In Singles, heavy horses, Class 34, was won by Harry Bateman, driving for Joseph Holland. Class 35, heavy doubles, won by Patrick White of the Metropolitan Coal Company.

There were five divisions of the class for old horses. In the class from 20 to 12 years, Tom and Jerry of the Boston Forge Company, driven by William B. Smith, a veteran driver, won. Frank, driven by John F. Connors, a veteran driver for the Stetson Coal Company, won the class from 12 to 14 years. Harry, 15 years old, won the next class. He was driven by John J. Prediani, and is owned by M. Prediani. In division D of the old horses, White John, twenty-seven years old, belonging to C. B. Smith & Co., and driven by Patrick F. Atwood, won. Doctor, twenty-nine years old, won the final division of old horses. Frank H. Buckley drove him for Mitchell J. Shea.

Class 37 was for champion old horses. Old Ned, thirty-seven years old, owned by James F. Weir and driven by F. F. Weir, won. The class for reconstructed horses was won by George H. Carter's horse, Mabel G., thirteen years old. In the final classes for barrel racks, hucksters and express horses, several prizes were awarded.

ASKS UNITED STATES TO CLAIM ISLANDS

John M. Longyear of Brookline has petitioned the Secretary of State at Washington to have the United States officially claim sovereignty over coal lands in the Spitzbergen Islands, which he has been exploiting. The islands, which he claims are now no man's land, but are in the group over which Norway has nominal sovereignty. He has hoisted the United States flag on them. He has expressed a fear that some enterprising Norwegian will dispossess him.

LONDON BUYS AMERICANS

The fact that the Supreme Court of the United States has ordered the Circuit Court to produce a model condemnation seems to have increased the confidence of investors, and some good-sized buying orders were placed in London for American issues. Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Reading and such issues as have large assets back of them but were held below intrinsic value through fear of legislation, were the most prominent in the buying. Steel, however, was freely offered, but this was more in the nature of a bear stand by the "bear raiders" than actual liquidation.

BETRAYED FRIEND, EXPIATES BY DEATH

SAN FRANCISCO, May 30.—Ichimatsu Ohashi, a fine looking young Japanese, called to-day at the Central Emergency Hospital and demanded that he be sent to prison because he had betrayed the wife of his best friend in Chicago. This friend followed him to San Francisco and demanded that he comply with the Japanese code—either commit harikari or suffer his crime to fall on his own family.

Ohashi could evade death by going to jail for several years, but when the officer said they could do nothing for him he became violent and was put in a straight-jacket.

He managed to work his hands free and hanged himself in a cell.

HUNTS RUNAWAY PAIR IN BOSTON

Miss Grace Sickels, who is sixteen years old and very pretty and talented, has disappeared from her home in Hillsboro, N. H., and John Sickels, her father, and a wealthy farmer, has had a warrant issued for the arrest of one Henry Bailey, upon the charge of abduction. For two weeks the anxious father has searched Boston and Lynn, assisted by the police of both cities. He believes his daughter is with Bailey. She left her room late at night and climbed or was carried down a ladder.

Bailey is a graduate of the Hillsboro Academy and has had a special training in music. Bailey visited Hillsboro to spend a vacation and met Miss Sickels at a social gathering; with the consent of her parents, he took her to several places.

VETERANS AT GRANT'S TOMB

NEW YORK, May 30.—New York to-day paid glorious tribute to the veterans of the Civil War—living and dead. The principal feature of the day was an enormous parade up Riverside Drive past the tomb of General Grant. The parade was reviewed by General Daniel E. Sickles. Twenty thousand men were in line while half a million spectators lined the course.

Long before the hour set for the parade to start crowds began to gather. Bunting and flags were draped from nearly all the buildings. The weather was ideal.

The cemeteries that hold the Civil War dead were visited by committees from Grand Army posts and descendants of the veterans. The tombs were draped with flags and the mounds strewn with flowers. The programme for the day was as follows:

SOUTH BOSTON YACHTS RACE

The yachting season was officially opened to-day with the open race of the South Boston Yacht Club off City Point. The race attracted one of the biggest fleets of racing craft for some years and an hour before the starting gun was fired at 11 o'clock all about City Point and at the floats of the Boston, South Boston and Mosquito Fleet Yacht Clubs were many of the fastest yachts enrolled in the Y. R. A. of Massachusetts.

The race to-day for all classes was over a course in Boston Harbor of nine miles and was a sort of tuning up race for many of the boats.

Much interest was centred in two classes, that of the 31-footer Class P boats, and the Cape catboat class. Both of these classes this Summer will defend cups from invaders from New York and Narragansett Bay.

Intercity Trophy Race.

Last season the Massachusetts boats went around the Cape and brought back the intercity cup for Cape catboats. The Class P boats will meet a trio from New York at Marblehead later in the Summer for the intercity trophy.

Percentages in to-day's race count for the selection of the Cape "cats" to defend the interstate trophy and will also count for the wresting of the Lipton trophy in the Class P.

Such boats as the Iris, Dolly III., Emeline, Hawke, Hush and Mudjekeeis met in the catboats, and the Amoret, Thomas, Nutmeg and Wianno, old boats in Class P, and Enid, will meet for the first time George Lee's new boat that replaces the Mayouneen that has gone to the lakes.

Asa Pendgrer George Owen has figured largely in the formation of this class, this race was of more than usual interest from the fact that the new Lee boat is from his design. From this prize that his boat has had thus far, the old boats were up against a new enemy and the other in the new Lee boat.

Mr. Burgess Is Missing.

Hollis Burgess, for the first time in years, was among the missing when the starting gun was fired for this race, although he was on the judges' boat. Mr. Burgess will handle the big 40-footer Altair in the races, and his Virginia, of the Boston yacht club championship, took the starting gun with a new man at the helm.

One of the interesting features of the day at City Point was the placing of the Mosquito Fleet Yacht Club into commission at noon. The big brass saluting piece boomed out the signal and up went the colors both club and national. Every yacht in commission that was attached to the squadron broke out the club colors. Commodore T. J. Kelley and the flag officers gave a reception to the club members and friends.

HOLYOKE GIRL FOUND SLAIN

NEW YORK, May 30.—On suspicion of having caused the death of his wife, Henry Schrelb, a chauffeur, was arrested at One Hundred and Twelfth street and Broadway early to-day.

The body of a woman, subsequently identified as Mrs Lillian Schrelb, was discovered in the bathtub of the Schrelb flat at No. 511 East Seventy-eighth street. Before her marriage Mrs Schrelb was Miss Lillian Glover. She was educated at a convent at Holyoke, Mass.

The body, coated with a chemical solution, which for the time being even hid the sex, was taken to the morgue, where an autopsy will be held. A dentist who filled several teeth of Mrs. Schrelb will attempt to identify the body.

Under the third degree at the morgue Schrelb broke down and cried out that the body suddenly presented to his gaze was that of his wife. Schrelb confronted with the body burst into a flood of tears.

"That is my girl, my little girl," he cried, "that is my girl."

Prior to this confrontation in the morgue Schrelb had declared that the woman in his apartment was not his wife. He had also declared that if the woman had been murdered it was not his work.

VETO BILL PASSES SECOND HEARING

LONDON, May 30.—With the passing of the second reading of the veto bill in the House of Lords without division, that measure is shelved until after the coronation, when the Lords will amend it in committee. Lord Morley, in the closing speech, intimated that the government would accept no amendments. The House of Commons passed the second reading of Chancellor Lloyd-George's state insurance bill.

Foolish Things Women Do

Women put ammonia into the water when washing their hair. This not only turns the hair gray, but has a deadly effect upon the hair roots. It makes the hair thin and lifeless.

Any tonic or invigorator containing alcohol is also dangerous. Most soaps and shampoos contain too much alkali, and people who use them run the risk and danger of losing their hair.

The best thing to use is a fine neutral soap, combined with Glycerin, Cocoanut Oil, White of Eggs and Salicylic Acid.

These are the ingredients used in Birt's Head Wash, which is an absolutely reliable preparation, because it does not contain any ammonia, alcohol or free alkali. It makes the hair soft and glossy and removes scales and dandruff.

INVESTIGATE CHILD'S DEATH

An investigation is under way to determine the cause of the death of Mary E. Hawe, two and one-half years, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Hawe of No. 147 B street, South Boston, whose body was found in the middle of B street almost in front of her home.

Just before her body was found the little girl had been into a store across the street and bought a stick of candy, part of which was in her hands when found.

Patrick Burke saw the body and picked it up and several little girls told him who she was and where she lived. Mr. Burke took the body to her mother, who was nearly prostrated at the sight. The child had received a fracture of the skull.

It is thought that a wagon ran over her. No one could be found who saw the accident, nor heard any cry.

Less than three months ago the child's father died.

TAKE BRIGANDS AT GUN POINT

Three highwaymen armed with revolvers and long stilettos were captured by the police of Cambridge today and identified as brigands who lured Fernelli Ferdinando, a Maine lumberjack, to a lonely section of Mt. Auburn early to-day, where they beat him and stunned him into insensibility and robbed him of $50.

The injured man is in the Cambridge Hospital in a critical condition. He was able to identify the three men as his assailants.

The prisoners were taken after the police had tip-toed up to a room at No. 120 Cushing street, Cambridge, and covered the trio with revolvers. Then three men were in bed, partly dressed. They were on were ready at hand, but so quietly did the police slip into the room that they had no chance to move until they were looking into the muzzles of the bluecoats' weapons.

The prisoners gave their names as Charles Parnitti, twenty years old; Salvatore Meriese, twenty-seven years old, and Angelo Lenghini, twenty-two years old.

Police Sergeant White, with Patrolmen Powers, Wayman and Tevlin, made the capture. They regard it as most important.

"It is the most dangerous bunch," said the sergeant, "that we ever bagged. Three of these men had a stiletto with a blade eighteen inches in length. He could have carved a man to pieces with it. How they came to leave their victim with any life in him is a mystery."

Was Left for Dead.

The chances are that they thought the Maine man was dead, as his head was knocked unconscious and then one of the number had given him a slash with a stiletto across the face. They left him on Aberdeen avenue, where he was found by a man who telephoned the police.

The victim came to Boston yesterday from Maine, met the men who robbed him and they spent the evening in the North End having a lively time. They told him of the opportunities of prolonging the gaiety in the Italian section of Cambridge near the Belmont line.

In the meantime they had had a chance to get a line on the Maine man's roll of money. The prisoners were locked up in the Cambridge police station, and there being no court to-day, they will be arraigned to-morrow.

TROLLEYS TAKEN IN G. T. FIGHT

PROVIDENCE, May 30.—H. F. Sherman, president of both the Providence & Danielson and the Sea View railways, which have come under control of the New Haven Railroad, declared to-day that "the lessee will have no effect on the entry of the Grand Trunk into Providence."

It was the original intention of the Grand Trunk, to enter Rhode Island by way of Williamantic, Ct., and it had an option on the Danielson line, but the Legislature, in granting the new Southern New England Railroad a charter, made it impossible for the roads to connect. It is said that both railways have been offered to the Grand Trunk and refused.

Grand Trunk Refused.

It is expected that the Sea View Railway of Williamantic, Ct., and it had an Westerly to connect with the Westerly & Stonington Street Railway.

With these additions of about fifty-two miles, the total street railway mileage owned by the New Haven in Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, is nearly 1,100.

The Sea View is about twenty miles long, running from an outlet on East Greenwich to Narragansett Pier and Peacedale. The Providence & Danielson has about twenty-seven miles in Rhode Island and five in Connecticut, running from Market square, Providence, to East Killingly, Ct., where it connects with a line of the Connecticut company running to Danielson, Ct.

Leased for 999 Years.

Through the Rhode Island Company a subsidiary, the New Haven has leased the Providence & Danielson for 999 years beginning June 30, 1911. The lessee will pay for the use from the stock and all fixed charges. Thirty thousand dollars is to be paid immediately as interest on bonds for the use.

The lease of the Sea View is in similar terms, except that it may elect upon the stock is to be paid June 30, 1912, and June 30, 1913, 2 per cent in that same date in 1914, 1915 and 1916, 3 per cent, the same date in 1917, 1918 and 1919, 4 per cent, upon the same date in 1920 and 1921, and 5 per cent in 1922 and three years.

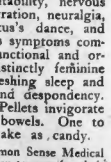
Treating The Wrong Disease



Many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous prostration, another with pain here and there, and in this way they present alike to themselves and their easy-going or over-busy doctor, separate diseases, for which he, assuming them to be such, prescribes his pills and potions. In reality they are all only symptoms caused by some weakness or derangement of the organs distinctly feminine. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, keeps up his treatment until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better by reason of the wrong treatment, but probably worse. A proper medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery. It has been well said, that "a disease known is half cured."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots without the use of alcohol and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the female system.

As a powerful, invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the distinctly feminine organs. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three a dose. Easy to take as candy.

EVERY WOMAN ought to possess Dr. Pierce's great book, the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a magnificent thousand-page illustrated volume. It teaches mothers how to care for their children and themselves. It is the best doctor to have in the house in case of emergency. Over half a million copies were sold at $1.50 each, but one free copy in cloth-covers will be sent on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of wrapping and mailing only. Address the publishers, World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

ADORN GRAVES OF WAR HEROES

Boston and all of New England to-day paid tribute to their soldier dead. Impressive Memorial Day services were held and floral pieces laid upon the graves of the men who gave their lives for their country or had passed away since the wars in which they fought.

An earnest effort was made to-day to decorate every soldier's grave in New England. No matter in what way the sun might or on which side he fell, a floral tribute to his valor was laid upon his last resting place.

In the town of Avon only four of the Grand Army Post were able to take part in the short march to the place where services were held, the other five surviving members of the ninety-six soldiers who went to the front from there during the Civil War being too enfeebled to participate in the day's proceedings.

Services on Common.

The services on Boston Common were in charge of Kingsley Post, No. 112. Led by the Corps Cadet Artillery, M. V. M., and band, seventy-five members of the post marched from their headquarters on Ashburton place to the Common, where a floral star-covered flag was placed. Commander Kane had the programme in charge. Following the services the post marched back to Ford Hall, where it enjoyed a banquet at noon.

The Robert G. Bell Post, composed of colored veterans, decorated the Shaw monument in front of the State House.

The Grand Army veterans owned Cambridge to-day and their comrades were well remembered. Mayor J. Edward Barry took part in the observances and gave an address at the old soldiers' lot in Mount Auburn cemetery. President Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read by Past Commander Darth E. Whitney of Post No. 57. The graves in the cemetery and the monument were decorated by the veterans.

Prior to going to the cemetery the veterans assembled in Harvard square and marched to the Soldiers' Monument on the Common, where a dirge was played by the band and prayer was offered. Following this the monument was decorated with wreaths.

The formation of the line was as follows: Zeigler's military band; Leslie F. Hunting Camp 12, Spanish War Veterans; J. C. Wellington Camp 14, Spanish War veterans; Col. Thomas Wentworth Higginson Camp 56, Sons of Veterans; Major Barry and Rev. F. L. Reel, pastor of the Church of the Ascension, chaplain of the day riding in a carriage; P. S. Davis Post 57, under Senior Vice-Commander William H. Thompson; John A. Logan Post 186 under Commander P. B. Lane; W. H. Starr Post 20, under Commander John Good; Charles Beck Post 56, under Commander John Stafford.

After the exercises on the Common cars were boarded for the cemetery, following the decoration of the graves the veterans returned to their quarters. Elaborate spreads were arranged in all the posts.

Commander John S. Kenney of Post 57 was chief marshal of the observances, while W. H. Estey, past commander of Post 186, was chief of staff. His aides were Past Commander M. P. Marks of Post 57, Past Commander C. H. Titus of Post 186, Past Commander J. F. Wilkinson of Post 20, Past Commander A. H. Ricker of Post 56 and Past Commander Krebsmaster of Camp 56, Sons of Veterans.

Many Graves Adorned.

Hollington S. Walcott, Post 102 of Milton, assisted four comrades to-day decorating 200 graves. At noon memorial exercises were held in the Town Hall, Milton. The pastor, Rev. G. S. Butler, spoke. Many school children took part in the singing of patriotic songs. Master Ralph Johnson, a twelve-year-old schoolboy, read the Gettysburg address. Bartlett W. Eldridge, sang "Old Glory." J. Kendall Pratt, recited the poem, "The Blue and the Gray." "Roy Billy" Rev. Charles Porter of the Hattison Baptist Church, delivered the address of the day.

Benjamin Stone, Jr. Post 68, with Nathaniel Bowditch Camp No. 30, Sons of Veterans, held services at Cedar Grove Cemetery, Mass. Thus 10,000 persons gathered to witness the exercises. Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read by Colonel William H. Dupree. Hon. Harvey Tompkins, former solicitor of Milton, made a stirring address. David B. Fletcher, commander of Post 68, G. A. R., had charge of the exercises.

Unveil Hyde Park Memorial.

Hyde Park observed not almost a man to witness the unveiling and dedication of the soldiers' monument presented to the town by Timothy Ingraham Post 121, G. A. R. in Fairview cemetery to-day.

The memorial consists of a huge granite boulder, oblong in shape, and standing six feet high, surmounted by a bronze statue of a Union soldier of heroic size. It was unveiled by the Misses Helen, Ruth W. and Marion Lewis, granddaughters of Major David W. Lewis, past commander of the post.

Major Lewis made the presentation speech, and the memorial to the Union dead was accepted by James H. Grant, chairman of the Board of Selectmen on behalf of the town. He in turn confided it to the care of the local post of the G. A. R., represented by Commander Frank H. Dodd.

Capt. John Dunn, Capt. R. I. S. W. N. and Company E, Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., decorated many graves in Neponset cemetery. They left Upham's Corner, Dorchester, in special cars.

Rev. Congressman James M. Curley spoke on "The Nation's Sacred Holiday" and Editor Walter L. Collins made a short address. The exercises were in charge of Joseph F. Donovan. A salute was fired at the close of the ceremonies by members of Company E.

MEXICAN MOBS KILL AND LOOT

MEXICO CITY, May 30.—Between sixty and ninety persons were killed and more than 100 wounded in rioting in the city of Puebla, capital of the State of that name, and the city is in ruins. The government building was burned and hundreds of stores and private residences looted.

Reports of this morning left for Puebla, five miles away. Its numbers were increased to 3,000 by the time it arrived before the latter city. Puebla is garrisoned by only 700 men, and its 10,000 inhabitants are terror-stricken.

Threat to Burn City.

The mob is made up mainly of bandits and ruffians. They have succeeded in put the city to the torch and will make good their boast unless reinforcements are rushed from here.

It is reported from Tampico that a mob attempted to storm the jail and liberate the prisoners last night, but the rioters were driven off by the soldiers, who fired and wounded several. Rioting also broke out in Monterrey. Rioting is still going on in Oaxaca.

Figueroa May Revolt.

General Figueroa, the insurrecto commander in Southern Mexico, has become the pivotal figure upon whom may hinge peace or war in the republic. Should Figueroa refuse to accept the decision of Francisco I. Madero that he is loyal to the Maderists and will recognize the mandates of Madero, actual peace is believed to be certain.

In Juarez the city are far from certain that Figueroa will remain loyal to Madero. He is now in the State of Morelos with a formidable army entirely devoted to him. Latest advices were that he was moving on Puebla, and his advance guard of Madero's instructions to avoid further hostilities.

General Miranda, Figueroa's right-hand man, is in the State of Morelos with a force of 5,000 men. A conference of the officers of the southern army has been called, when the soldiers will settle definitely what course of action they intend to pursue.

MADERO SAYS HE WILL WELCOME REYES TO MEXICO

EL PASO, Tex., May 30.—Citizen Francisco I. Madero, as he now terms himself, since the Mexican peace has been declared, to-day is preparing for his departure for Mexico City, undaunted by reports that a cabal exists to blow up his train and assassinate him on the way.

Madero said he would not carry a bodyguard with him, as he was certain that the backbone of the conspiracy against his life was broken. His advisers are pleading with him, however, to take the escort of 100 picked men they had selected to accompany him to the capital. According to the present plans, Madero will travel in a special train, leaving Juarez on Friday of this week.

Madero declared he had no objections to the return of General Bernardo Reyes, and scoffed at the reports from the national capital that Reyes was coming from Cuba to head a counter-revolt to upset Madero's power.

"I look forward to meeting General Reyes with a great deal of pleasure," said Madero. "I understand that Gen. Cuellar has been delegated to receive General Reyes, extending to him official welcome to the country. There is certainly no objection on my part to the return of Reyes to the country. Should circumstances warrant I would not hesitate to give my approval to his elevation to the command of an army of pacification. I am making preparations to leave Juarez on Friday of this week upon a special train. Evidence of my sincere belief in the provisional government is contained in the circumstance that I shall not take a bodyguard."

Madero will use his influence to prevent General Navarro, the federal commander who surrendered Juarez to the insurrectos, from being court martialled and executed. Madero will endeavor to have Navarro retained in the federal service under him as a general on the staff.

8-HOUR DAY FOR NURSES URGED

An eight-hour day for nurses was endorsed to-day at the annual meeting of the American Society of Superintendents of Training Schools for Nurses, which met in the Park Street Church.

Miss M. Adelaide Nutting of Columbia University reported that she sent questions on the matter to a number of training-schools and hospitals and found that out of 118 hospitals reporting nurses worked ten or more hours. There are only about four hospitals where nurses have the eight-hour system.

"I am asked what changes I would suggest," said Miss Nutting. "The change to an eight-hour day for nurses would help to solve many problems. There is an unrest in our work. It is general, and these changes are more rapid than they were years ago. Women who enter schools soon get discouraged, and those who are striving to improve conditions find it extremely difficult. I do think that the scientific study of our schools should be undertaken, and would say that the Carnegie Foundation would be asked to take up this study."

Miss Carolyn C. Van Blarcom, executive secretary of the New York Commission for the Prevention of Blindness, argued for the eight-hour day.

"When I had charge of St. Luke's Hospital in St. Louis I introduced this system and found it very helpful," said Miss Van Blarcom. "The nurses worked better under it, and were able to enjoy their hours of recreation, eat better, and altogether it was a great improvement over the other plan of working them 12 hours. You really get more out of the nurses by this system, and nurses work harder and more efficiently under it than any other."

A pen motion of Miss Anna Goodrich of New York this resolution was passed:

"That the Carnegie Foundation be asked to make a study of training school management, with special reference to the education of nurses and their hours of service."

CIRCUS BIGGEST AND BEST EVER

All the dazzling, amazing, marvelous stunts that the big bills and the press agent told about are there. Where? Why at the circus, of course. There's no use take about it the Ringling Bros. show is undoubtedly "the best ever." The clowns are funnier, the animals are handsomer and more numerous and the ring features are the latest and most hair-raising acts possible to assemble from all parts of the world.

Despite the big peanut factory fire the vendors had a good supply for the animals and the joy of "chucking" peanuts into the gaping mouths of the elephants and tossing them to the monkeys to scrap over was a great delight as ever. The menagerie contains the finest specimens of the animal kingdom, caged and uncaged, ever shown here. The headliner is Tiny Tom Tinker, the cutest mite of an elephant, which is called the Incubator baby, for it has a glass house all its own, heated and kept at an even temperature so that Tom's health will not be endangered.

An excellent band concert precedes the "grand introductory pageant" which gives a pleasing display of the gorgeous trappings, the well-groomed and handsome horses and the clever riding of experts.

Even the trained circus experts would have a hard time picking the best acts from the three rings, for there are so many of them and all so meritorious that to mention any special act would be hardly fair. The high standard set by the world's greatest circus is shown in every act that takes place in every ring.

The trained-horse exhibit imported from the circus Schuman in Berlin, is probably the finest trained horse show ever in Boston. The Madam Marguis head-to-head balancing act is one of the top-liners. "Tempo" the trained dog of Alfred Loyd did amazing acrobatic stunts on the back of a horse. In the trapeze work the "Flying Wards" are probably without equals.

And so it goes—riders, acrobats, jugglers and all active, daring and masters of their art.

10,000 AT FETE TO AID CHILDREN

Nearly ten thousand people, mostly children, to-day crowded the Boston Arena where the annual festival in aid of the Home for Destitute Catholic Children was held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Home.

The hall was lined with tables loaded with homemade cake and other good things, each table representing a different parish. In the afternoon a series of dances was given by children from the home.

The first event was a military drill, including thirty boys, which was followed by a "Witch's Dance" by a corresponding number of girls. The next events were a pantomimic presentation of "Morning, Noon and Night" by twelve of the smaller children; the "Fan Dance" and "Gray" a "Violet Dance" and a "Hungarian Dance." But the greatest enthusiasm was evoked by a dozen babies dressed in their little white "nighties" who said "Good Night" to the audience. All the dances were under the direction of Miss Rose I. Byrne.

The ladies in charge of the tables were: St. Mary's, Charlestown, Mrs. P. C. Kelly, assisted by Miss Breslin, Mrs. Joseph Kelleher; St. Margaret's, Dorchester, Mrs. J. Leary; St. James's, Boston, Miss Katherine McDermott; St. Joseph's, Somerville, Mrs. James Walsh; North shore, Mrs. Margaret A. Noonan; Assumption, East Boston, Mrs. P. J. Foley and Mrs. M. J. RECORD CROWD ON BIG LINER

The Cunard steamship Franconia sailed for Queenstown, Fishguard and Liverpool from this port this morning with the biggest passenger list ever known on any ship leaving Boston.

There were 1,850 people aboard. Of this total 275 were in the saloon, 500 in the second cabin and 1,075 in the steerage. Most of the second cabin and steerage people were English or Scotch, going home to attend the coronation celebration, which incidentally also was the big attraction for most of the Americans in the saloon.

Never was such a crowd seen before on a Boston wharf to watch a ship depart. The crowd of friends who came to bid farewell to passengers must have numbered 5,000. It took the Franconia's officers forty-five minutes to clear the ship of those who were not sailing. The saloon and second cabin were banked with boxes of flowers sent aboard as "good voyage" offerings. There were enough flowers to load two freight cars. Boston florists must have sold about $25,000 worth to make such a showing.

Most of the people in the steerage were British textile workers who had been saving for months for the trip aboard. Among the saloon passengers was Sir John Murray, famous Scotch scientist, who has been lecturing before American colleges on "Deep Sea Research," accompanied by Lady Murray and their daughter, Miss Rhoda Murray. Among the Bostonians in the saloon were Mrs. Basil T. Burr, George R. Batcheller, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. A. Clausen and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Conrad, F. L. and David Dunne, Mrs. C. Dunne and children, Evan A. Lelph, Mrs. A. C. Lawrence, Major Herbert Palmer, R. A., Miss Amanda W. Parry, Rev. J. A. Walsh and the Rev. Charles W. Wendte.

Sailing was delayed at the last moment for almost an hour by the arrival of a large quantity of steerage passengers who had to be booked before the Franconia left her dock.

GERMANY WILLING TO JOIN PEACE MOVE

DON'T BE MISLED

Stomach Trouble Often Presents Symptoms That May Be Mistaken for Signs of Other Disorders.

Palpitation of the heart does not imply that the vital organ is diseased.

Pain in the back does not necessarily mean kidney disease.

Headache does not often indicate that there is anything wrong with your head.

All of these symptoms are caused by stomach trouble and when this is righted the alarming symptoms disappear. If you have them look to the condition of your stomach for the cause before you start to treat the symptoms rather than the disease.

If you are suffering from stomach trouble you cannot do better than follow the advice of Mr. J. S. Barnhart, a farmer, on R. F. D. No. 8, Butler, Pa., who says:

"When living near Mt. Vernon, Ohio, I became seriously ill from stomach trouble and finally had to give up my work as school teacher. I had no appetite and what food I did eat would lie heavily on my stomach. My bowels were irregular and I was reduced in weight from 160 to 130 pounds. I was nervous, could not get a good night's sleep and had no ambition to work. My back ached and there were pains through my arms and shoulders. My heart was weak and the least exertion would cause it to palpitate. In the morning I would be dizzy on getting up from bed and there would be black specks before my eyes. My head would ache all over but particularly in the back. I was pale and had a hacking cough which alarmed my friends.

"The doctor treated me for stomach trouble but didn't help me much and and then I tried several medicines which were recommended to me but with no relief. The druggist urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and was so certain that they would help me that I decided to give them a trial. After taking a few boxes I began to feel a little hungry. Something I hadn't felt for a year. I also began to sleep better and I was so encouraged that I kept on with the pills. The result was that my stomach became strong, my other troubles disappeared and I was cured."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale at all druggists, or will be mailed to any address, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

STEEL DEAL IN BIG BANK PANIC

NEW YORK, May 30.—Oakleigh Thorne, president of the Trust Company of America, in an interview here, declares in favor of a thorough sifting of the conditions under which J. P. Morgan and Company dominated the banking world during the panic of 1907 and brought about the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company merger with the Steel Trust.

It is known that documentary evidence obtained by President Thorne has been placed before the Stanley investigating committee, showing that George W. Perkins, Morgan's partner, personally gave out the statement which started the run on the trust company which all but caused its ruin.

The statement referred to is the one published in a New York newspaper on the morning of October 23, 1907. It gave the impression that the Trust Company of America was a large holder of Tennessee Coal and Iron stock, and that the institution was in a bad way.

Published in One Paper.

Every other newspaper in New York received the statement, but it was published in only one paper. This was not due to any desire on the part of other papers to suppress news, but because the statement of Mr. Perkins that the Trust Company of America was shaky was contrary to the known facts.

Subsequent developments proved that the attitude of the papers which withheld the statement was correct. The publication in the one newspaper started a run on the bank.

The documentary evidence of Mr. Perkins's responsibility in the matter is a letter written by Melville E. Stone, manager of the Associated Press, to Mr. Thorne, which recites a conversation between Mr. Stone and Mr. Perkins during which the latter admitted the facts of the case.

The interview took place at the Lotus Club after the panic, and was arranged by Mr. Stone at the request of Mr. Thorne, who was anxious to know what explanation Mr. Perkins had to make.

Mr. Stone first reported the result of the interview verbally to Mr. Thorne, but later by request reduced it to writing in the form of a letter. A photographic facsimile of the communication has been placed in the hands of the Stanley investigating committee. Mr. Thorne declines to make public the text of the letter, but it is known that Mr. Perkins's only excuse for his act was that he thought the tide of the panic could be stemmed by superficing the Knickerbocker Trust and the Trust Company of America.

Acted "Without Malice."

It is understood that Mr. Stone, who has the reputation of having friends among the Morgan crowd, after telling what Mr. Perkins said, wrote that he believed Perkins had acted without malice.

The part that Mr. Stone played in this matter is intensely interesting, due to the fact that he is a friend of both Mr. Thorne and Morgan. Also his position as head of the Associated Press adds interest to the part he played in the now historic financial crisis.

The most interesting point is that Mr. Perkins and H. P. Davidson of J. P. Morgan & Company had their heads shaved by Mr. Thorne that the Trust Company was not closed before they went into conference at the Manhattan Hotel. Here is what Mr. Thorne has to say about this:

"On the afternoon of October 22, Mr. Perkins called me on the telephone and made an appointment at the Union League Club, which is just around the corner from my home. We met as arranged and Mr. Perkins was present. They asked me to walk with the coalition of the Trust Company, and asked if I would consent to a committee examining the securities and loans.

Institution Solvent.

"I replied that the institution was solvent beyond any question, and we invited the inspection which they suggested. I had a statement of finance in my pocket and showed it to them.

"Mr. Perkins replied:

"Thorne, that is fine; I am only too glad to hear that you are in good shape.

"It was then arranged that the committee which was to examine the securities and loans would meet me at the bank, No. 57 Wall street, at 7 o'clock the following morning. I learned later that the Morgan representatives left there went directly to the Manhattan Hotel, and there the Perkins's statement was issued a few hours later.

"I was in such a hurry to get to the bank the following morning to meet the committee that I did not see the statement until I had been in my office several hours and my attention was directed to the long line of depositors who had formed and who were clamoring for their money. I could not understand what had precipitated such a scene, and walked out along the line until I saw a man whom I knew.

Showed Statement.

"I asked my friend why everybody had so suddenly become alarmed about the condition of the Trust Company. For an answer a copy of a newspaper was thrust into my hand with the suggestion from the depositors—'Read that.'

"I had no idea at the time who could have been responsible for the article, but my suspicions were aroused when the committee went away after a few hours' work and never came back. The fact of the matter is that committee never did make a report to the public as was the original purpose in order to satisfy depositors. They examined $10,000,000 of securities, however, and I was personally informed that the bank's valuation had been accepted as correct.

"I have always felt the time would come when the facts of this case would reveal themselves, and I believe it will be a good thing for the banking world generally to have the entire situation opened to the public.

"I welcome any investigation that will bring this about.

"That panic and the way it was dominated by one set of bankers has been a lesson to us all, and I am of the opinion that it will not occur again—not at an early date at least."

COUNCIL STILL DEFIES GOV. BASS

CONCORD, N. H., May 30.—Governor Robert P. Bass was elected with his five councillors at the Capitol for seven hours today, but failed to break the deadlock over the election of a Public Service Commission.

The date for another session was not set and the State faces a situation that apparently will deprive it of a Railroad Commission for some time.

HAPPY NEWS BOYS WIN GAME, 18-5

The Happy News Boys won their seventh straight victory this morning by taking the Mammoths of Cambridge into camp by the score of 18 to 5. The News boys put up a fine fielding exhibition and they supported their pitcher in great style. Happy's boys were also there with the hitting and ran up a total of eighteen hits.

L. Pass twirled superb ball and fanned fourteen of his opponents. Last week he fanned eighteen in a game and he worked hard to beat his record, but just fell short. B. Levenson was the star performer of the day with two triples, one double and three singles out of six times at the bat. Donnelly played a fine game at third base. His work on several occasions stops that are hardly equaled among the amateurs, and also made three hits. The Cambridge team played a good game, but they were outclassed.

RARIDEN MAY GO TO PHILLIES

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—The Philadelphia management to-day denied that there was a deal on with Boston whereby Fred Tenney was to get Pitchers Beebe and Ewing and Catcher McDonough for either Pitcher Graham or Rariden.

Rumors have been rife here ever since the Phillies hit the road, and one paper came out with an announcement to-day that the club had decided to cut loose Kitty Bransfield, Pitchers Beebe, Ewing and Schultz, Catcher McDonough and Outfielder Welsh. Pruitt, a kid just secured from the South, is also to be canned before getting a trial.

But all these stories were denied, although it was admitted that a trade may be arranged with Fred Tenney during the Phillies' stay in Boston whereby they could secure either Graham or Rariden. It is said that Tenney, however, wants three players for either one of his backstops, and this is what is holding up the deal.

LANGFORD BOUT IS CALLED OFF

CHICAGO, Ill., May 30.—Governor McGovern of Wisconsin refused to permit the Langford-Capont glove battle to take place at Kenosha, Wis., last night. The State's chief executive notified the Kenosha promoters that he would not sanction the affair, and they quietly called it off. Hundreds of tickets had been sold by the local agency here. Neither of the fighters had left this city when the news was received here.

RUSTLERS' ERRORS LOSE MORNING GAME

By R. W. LARDNER.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, May 30.—The Rustlers dropped this morning's game to the Phillies, 3 to 0, in ten innings. Costly errors by Steinfeldt and Hunter Brown gave the visitors their opening in the tenth. Then Brown lost his effectiveness and Philadelphia compiled three tallies.

Previous to this round the game was a great pitchers' battle between Brown and Ingerton and both were given swell support. Moore held the Rustlers to three hits and really deserved the victory.

MORNING GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Phillies—Knabe flied to Ingerton. Paskert out, Sweeney to Tenney. Lobert flied to Goode. NO RUNS.

Rustlers—Sweeney walked. Tenney hit into a first double play, Knabe to Doolan to Lobert. Herzog singled to left. Ingerton flied out to Paskert. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Phillies—Magee singled to left. Luderus flied to Ingerton. Walsh hit into a double play, Herzog to Sweeney to Tenney. NO RUNS.

Boston—Miller flied to Magee. Goode out on a grounder to Steinfeldt fielded to Lobert. NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

Phillies—Doolan flied to Goode. Doolan doubled to left centre. Moore walked. Knabe was called out on strikes. Goode rolled Paskert of a triple with a great running catch near the left field seats. NO RUNS.

Boston—Doolan threw out Reiden. Brown threw out Paskert. Sweeney fouled to Luderus. NO RUNS.

FOURTH INNING.

YOUR DECISION IS NEEDED

If we could make up the minds of all the men in Boston we would have all the tailoring trade in the city.

But we can't do it.

All we can do is present the facts about our goods and let each reader make up his own mind as to whether or not he wishes to have us make his clothes.

We make the best clothes that can be made for the money we ask. Our facilities help out a great deal in this. Nineteen years of improving also means much.

We carry only the best woolens—fresh from the mills—never any job lots or old stocks. Buying for cash in vast quantities enables us to save $1 and over per yard.

Our shop is well organized—we have everything under our personal supervision—we conduct only this one big tailor shop and will guarantee to make you a perfect fitting, stylish, good-wearing suit of clothes for $15 to $25. The choice of cloth and materials makes the difference in prices.

We would like to decide for you—but that is impossible. You must decide for yourself—and if you are in doubt you ought, in all fairness, to give us the benefit of that doubt and let us show you some goods-in-the-piece today, this evening, or any time you feel like calling.

The Great Men and Women Are Those Who Conquer Mind and Body

By THOMAS TAPPER.

I.

YOU ARE not a body. You HAVE a body. All the difference in the world results from which of these two statements you think is the true one.

A man can learn to make his mind obey him. When he knows that his mind is his own to direct as he will, then it is easy for him to see that his body is his own, to be used and directed in the same way.

Now, it is well within the truth to say that a man succeeds in life just as he earns to do his work with his mind and his body as his two great servants.

If he wants to have a strong body, he must devote his thoughts to strength, if he wants to be a rich man, he must think and plan and work thoughts of riches. If he wants to be of great use in the world, he must direct his thoughts upon good-ness. Any or all of these will come to him IF HE KEEPS ON THINKING ABOUT THEM.

It sounds easy, does it not?

And yet, most people fail to master mind and body. But success depends on this very mastery.

Why do they fail?

There are certain things about the mind and body which must be understood at once if you want to be a success in life. In the years of childhood and early youth, and before the man knows just what he wants to do in the world, mind and body are full of strength and freshness. We use these with little or no thought. We do not know that they are our servants. We slowly comes to believe that "I am the mind and body. What they do, I am."

But, in fact, one should believe, "I HAVE a mind and a body. What I do with them, I am."

II.

When this view of the matter comes before him, he decides to be the boss of himself. It looks simple, and so he begins. He then finds out that both mind and body HAVE BECOME MACHINE-LIKE. They seem to act of themselves. He tries to make them do what he wishes, but in spite of his command they slip back to the old way of machine action, and he decides it is no use to try further.

Every man and woman comes to this place some time in life, and must decide either to be the boss of the mind and body, or give up and let them run around in their little ring.

The successful men and women are those who, at this period, fight it out and win.

The great horde of people who do not succeed in the world are those who give up and let the mind machine and the body machine go their own way.

You now know how to win success. Be the boss of your two great servants.

A man who owns a fine watch is proud of it. He has given good money for it. When he shows it to his friends he explains its fine movement, its escapement and its correctness. The man with an automobile does the same thing. He knows that the automobile will carry him where he wants to go, if the motor is always in good shape, and he tries to keep it so.

When the gasoline tank is empty, he fills it again with gasoline because that is the food which the machine needs. He does not say to the tank:

"Well, old man, fill up on a cocktail this time, or, have a Scotch highball. You must be tired of gasoline."

All you have to do, is to imagine a man in the place of the tank, and the whole picture is plain.

A tank is a stupid, unthinking thing. It can do its share of the business if it is fed with gasoline. When it is fed with cocktails it stops work.

A man is a divine, thinking thing. He, too, knows that he can do this work with the proper supplies. But he gets it into his head that he can take in anything that he may select for food and drink and still run the machine. Hence cocktails and highballs.

After a while the body machine goes badly or stops. The man suspects that he is pouring in the wrong sort of supplies. But he likes them. So he keeps on until he is referred to by those who know him as a "tank."

The reference is an insult to a real tank, for no tank in the world ever asks for cocktails with which to feed its motor when its work is done with gasoline.

III.

The first lesson then in regard to the body and its use is to learn what kinds of food the body needs in order to do its best work.

So sensitive is the physical machine that you can tell in a moment whether you are feeding it with the right material or not. A sensible man soon learns what kinds of gasoline will make his machine do the most work. When he learns this the rest is easy.

A motor runs best when it is kept clean in every part, seen and unseen. A good motor, fed with good gasoline, oiled with the best oil and made clean every day is a wonderful unit of power. It will respond to almost any demand and be efficient for years.

So with the physical motor. Supply it with the proper fuel (food and drink), keep it clean within and without, and the wonderful results that will come from it, in use and endurance, make the best mechanical motor in the world look like a child's top.

There is one more thing to be said about mind and body, and then a man's understanding of them is as complete as the nature of the machine will permit.

This is their relation to the world about us. The world in which we live offers countless temptations to both mind and body. This world about us makes us want the things about us. They appeal to our senses. We want to see them, hear them, feel them, taste them and smell them.

And it is often right that we should do so, but a man who wants to succeed in life knows that HE must decide what his senses shall do. He will never permit THEM to decide for HIM. He knows that he must keep himself in hand and never give in when he should hold back.

The moment he has reached this point, he is a king in a kingdom. His mind is his prime minister, his body and his senses are his servants.

The things of the world are his for the asking for he is a king, and the people of the world are sacred to him because he knows that each one of them has just as much right to be king or queen as he has.

An Expert Beggar

HOW Lord Rothschild must hate be-snarls! At the last one he attended he was badly victimized by a well-known woman author.

"Won't you buy? Won't you buy?" she cried, as he walked past her stall.

"I would willingly," he said, "but really, the articles you have for sale are rather bulky."

Then, catching sight of a little pile of papers, each bearing the author's signature, he added:

"But I shall be proud to purchase your autograph."

With ready wit the lady writer took a slip and scribbled above her name the words: "Received from Baron Rothschild the sum of fifty pounds for charity."

If the Baron was staggered he did not show it. Gravely handing her a bank note for the amount, he said: "Madam, this autograph shall occupy an honored place in my collection."

Reward of Merit

THE motor car was obstinate. It wouldn't budge. Industriously the man in waterproof cap and goggles turned the crank handle; but without result. He turned and turned and turned. Then he paused.

"Twist it again, Alfered!"

"I'm a 'oss I!"

"Go it, Johnson I!"

Thus the crowd.

But to such gibings he was deaf.

Once more he hopefully seized the crank and turned it strenuously. No effect. Again he paused to remove his cap and regain his breath.

Observing the action, an elderly gentleman stooped forward and dropped a coin in the upturned cap.

"Thank you, my man—thank you!" he murmured. "It's the only street organ I ever saw that didn't send me nearly deaf with its noise! You deserve a copper!"

Man, Not Woman, the Emotional Animal

Barring Tears, He Shows It in Everything He Does and Says

By DOROTHY DIX

FOR a long time, one of the chief reasons urged against giving women the right to vote was that women were so emotional they could not be safely trusted with the ballot.

Now comes along a great nerve specialist who declares men are far more emotional than women, and that it has taken centuries of training and hard fighting to give them the power to suppress their emotions, and to resist the desire of a good cry, or go into hysterics.

Of course, men are more emotional than women, though they display their "feelings" in a different way. Men, that is Anglo-Saxon men, don't burst into tears when they are wrought up; but neither do women, always, unless there is something to be gained by it. Weeping is not a reliable barometer of a woman's emotions. It is the measure of her ability to work people and get what she wants.

Generally speaking, crying is becoming a domestic art. A wife weeps to get a new dress. A business woman doesn't weep because she'll get fired if she does, and so the waterfire in emotion between the two sexes is gradually drying up.

Barring tears, as the indication of hysteria, in every other matter of temperament, man is far more emotional than woman, as even the most cursory observation will show.

Take the Matter of Swearing

Take, as a very common example, the matter of swearing. Suppose, in a crowd, somebody steps on a man's foot. Into the air immediately rent with blue blazes! Doesn't the man sputter and fume and quit forked lightning, and call upon all of his gods to consign the malefactor to places where he won't need to wear an overcoat even in Winter?

But suppose an even worse accident happens to a woman, and some great lumbering lout treads upon her fine new frock, and tears it past all mending. What does the lady do? Does she rip out a few lurid oaths and tell the man what she thinks of him, and what she hopes will be his ultimate doom.

Not at all. She smiles sweetly and sorrowfully in his eyes, and says that it doesn't matter. She may be thinking things that begin with a big, big D, but she doesn't utter them, and this is a triumph of self-control that no man could exhibit under the circumstances.

Take note, also, of how men go to pieces over trifles that women meet with perfect calmness, as exhibited in the simple act of putting up a new gown. Every married woman will testify that, when her husband fastens her up the back, he yelps every time he jams his thumb against a pin, and boils over with rage when he fails to make a hook and loopeye connect, and that, during the entire performance, he says perfectly awful things that are shocking to listen to.

Observe, too, the difference when mother has a headache and when father has one. Who's happy then? When mother has a headache she goes about her business as usual. She sits at the head of the table and serves the soup, and sees that father has everything the way he wants it, and all that anybody knows about her suffering is that she doesn't eat anything herself, and looks white and drawn.

When Father Is Ill

But, Heavens alive, when father comes home from the office with a headache there's something doing! He keeps everybody on the jump for hot water bags, and ice packs, and poultices, and special dishes, and takes forty kinds of headache medicines, and sends for a doctor, and a trained nurse, and is scared blue for fear he is going to die.

Any surgeon will tell you that a little mite of a woman will walk into an operating room and climb up on the operating table with no more emotion than if she were going to play bridge, whereas nine-tenths of the men patients are in such a blue funk of fear they have to be given a little ether in their rooms and carried, unconscious, into the operating room.

Women can get pretty well worked up over a club election, but they never go so far as to yell themselves black in the face and tear off their hats and dance upon them when their candidate goes through; nor do you ever observe them walking about with a plaward around their necks, or trundling a wheelbarrow up Washington street or paying other fool election bets into which their emotional temperaments have led them.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DON'T BELIEVE GOSSIP.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man, eighteen, and considered good looking. About six months ago I attended an engagement party and while there met a young girl about my own age and quite good looking, who, it seems, has fallen in love with me.

I took a liking to her also, but merely as a friend. I wrote to her, called on her and we went out together; but, for the past month or so, due to business and social engagements, I neglected even to correspond with her.

I have learned, through a friend of mine, and in another way, that she thinks she has either offended me or that I am keeping company. This is not true.

I desire that our friendship shall continue the same as before, and I am sure she feels likewise. Therefore I want to correct the wrong ideas which she has concerning my failure to correspond.

As it is inconvenient for me to write unless an urgent need is made to hand, I think the only way I can explain matters is by writing and stating my position. I object to doing it it might sound like a mamby-pamby apology. Nevertheless, would you advise me to write? If not, then, otherwise should I commit her.

SINCERE FRIEND.

YOU must not believe more than half of what you hear about such a serious matter as this. This girl may have expressed a liking for you and may be desirous of being friends, but surely nothing more.

With the proper respect toward woman, no man could so misjudge her as to think that capable of speaking so slightingly of such an intimate subject.

The mention of this occurrence might deeply offend her and I advise you, if you wish to renew your acquaintance with her, to put this matter out of your mind and to prove yourself worthy of her friendship.

GET PARENT'S APPROVAL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with a man seventeen years my senior, being twenty years of age. I always thought it better to be an old man's darling than a young man's slave.

My father does not agree to our marriage, as this man is only four years younger than he is. Now what would you advise me to do? I know positively he will give me a lovely home. PATIENTLY.

SUCH an objection as you speak of is not sufficient to prevent you from marrying the man you love.

However, I advise you to wait for the approval of your parents. When they understand that this means your happiness, they cannot fail to give their consent.

"That's near enough, stranger," responded the citizen who was leaning against the station. "You've done a heap better in naming it than we ever could—why not let it go at that?"

A SUCCESSFUL WIFE

A Really Great Novel by G. Dorset. Copyright, 1910, by Harper & Brothers

"A Successful Wife" is running serially in the daily and Sunday editions of the AMERICAN. A liberal instalment of this great human interest novel will be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

ESTHER CASEY, a poor girl whose parents are dead, leaving her with several young brothers and sisters to support, comes from Brackettville, a suburb, to begin life in New York. She works her way up from a position as typewriter at $5 a week until at twenty-five she is head of her own office force in a Wall street brokerage.

William Falsworth, a rich mining president, who has a neglectful wife, falls in love with Esther and asks her to elope with him to the West. She refuses and he becomes enraged. He learns that Stephen Kirkland, a nephew of the immensely wealthy Senator Bellars, is smitten with her and he threatens to kill Kirkland. He tells Esther that Kirkland, who is one of her patrons, is a reprobate and queers her for any good woman to associate with.

Kirkland, after a long courtship, wins Esther's consent to marry, but Senator Bellars, when he hears of it, is enraged and cuts Kirkland in his will. Stephen decides to earn his way by writing a book. They marry in New York and live in a boarding house in Washington square. Stephen is sorely disappointed when his book is rejected by the publisher and takes to drink.

Under the influence of his wife he reforms again. About this time an aunt dies, leaving him $50,000. His friend Sinclair induces him to invest it in a railroad scheme.

They go to the Adirondacks for a vacation. There is a beautiful girl there, a Miss Pagee. She becomes infatuated with Kirkland, who takes her out canoeing frequently. They go out one day, and at 9 o'clock in the evening have not returned. Miss Pagee's aunt, much alarmed, comes to see Esther about it.

A Late Return

"ABOUT what?" And I guess my tone scared her.

"Oh, you know how people go on."

And I said, "Yes, summer hotels are celebrated for the rocking-chair club."

"You are too indifferent, Mrs. Kirkland."

And as lightly as I could I said that my husband was a great admirer of ladies' beauty.

She stared at me as though she thought I was a fool.

"Why, but don't you care?"

"I like to see him amused," I answered.

Miss Pagee's aunt gave a sniff, then said: "Well, I would like to see them come home! It's scandalous. I'll never chaperon Millie Pagee again as long as I live."

Then she let me get dressed, and I tried not to be anxious, but, as time went on and ten o'clock came, and eleven o'clock came, everybody in the hotel was talking and wondering and watching out on the lake for the boat and calling out through megaphones; but they didn't come.

Miss Pagee's aunt had some guides start out for White River at midnight, and we sent more guides through the woods. There was nothing else for us to do. A telegram had come for my husband, and I kept it in my lap, and Miss Pagee's aunt and I sat side by side on the piazza in the corner next to the woods, and she cried and told me a lot about her niece, how gay Millie was and how headstrong, and that she had always been a flirt.

"But this is the worst case," she said, with perfect indifference to my feelings. "I have never seen Millie so absorbed as she is now. I shall take her away from here to-morrow—that is, if she ever comes back! If she does," she concluded, "her reputation is ruined, ruined!" And she blew her nose.

Words Didn't Hurt

It may be strange to say, but her words didn't hurt me in the least. For some reason or other I was perfectly calm, and I felt rather solemn. I couldn't shake off the superstition that something had happened to Miss Pagee, and that my husband was all right. It was nothing but nervous superstition, no doubt, but that was the reason I took it so easily, I guess.

It would be hours before the guides could return, and a lot of people waited down in the office and at the bar, and it seemed as though I couldn't stand the click of the billiard-balls and the smell of lemon-peel.

At 3 o'clock in the morning Miss Pagee's aunt and I were both sitting there close to the piazza rail. She was dozing a little when I heard voices near my side, and I looked over the rail, and there were my husband and Miss Pagee walking in from the woods. Miss Pagee's aunt and I both stood up, and she called out:

"Well, Millie Pagee, are you stark, staring mad?"

My husband's voice sounded cheerful and calm, and he laughed and answered.

"Yes, Mrs. Burnett, we are nearly mad!"

They came up on the steps to us. It seemed that their canoe had sprung a leak up-stream, and the only thing they could do was to make an old carry and walk in to Paul Smith's, so they told us. They looked very white and very tired, and Miss Pagee sank down on a chair and put her face in her hands, and her aunt scolded and scolded, and pretty soon Miss Pagee burst out crying.

"Can't you be still, Aunt Jessica? Can't you see I am exhausted and on the verge of hysterics?"

My husband had gone to get some sandwiches and some milk for her, and when he came back I handed him the telegram. He read it under the lamp hanging up against the door, and the gusts and the mosquitoes swarmed thick around it. He stuffed it in his pocket and said:

"Esther, let's go up. We will bid these ladies good-night. I have to go up to town by the morning train." And he shook hands with Miss Pagee's aunt and said he was dreadfully sorry, and Miss Pagee just touched his hand, and I noticed it was cold.

Large Figures.

My husband was very much excited, and when we got up to our room he told me that he was about to be a rich man.

"I am speaking in large figures," and he emphasized, "very large figures. You have been so simple in your life and your ideas that I doubt if you can realize what it means to be rich. Can you?"

It might have disappointed him if I told him that I couldn't realize it, so I only smiled. Our rooms were hot and close, and the lamp made it hotter. He took off his vest and coat and collar, and walked up and down the room.

"It will be superb," he said, "to find ourselves above these petty annoyances—to be able to do legitimately some of the things I have dreamed of. Esther, how will you look in Bellagio?" He caught me by the arm and stared at me. "I shall build a pink villa and dream for days on the bosom of Como."

He talked about many things he would do and the places he would see again.

"Sin is a great friend," he repeated many times, "and you didn't like him. My dear girl, you must learn to know the ring of true metal. Sin is the king of friends."

I was sitting on the bed braiding my hair.

My husband went on to say how Mr. Sinclair put him on this deal and advised him to invest in the opening of Wisconsin oil lands, and that he had put in all his own money, and that Mr. Ellis had advanced him a few years' salary, and he was getting big pay then. Coming up to me he said:

"Now, I have to put up just a little more margin for a day, for this is the crisis. How much money have you in the savings-bank?"

I told him I had $1,500 and he asked me to lend it to him, and I gave him a check.

When Claude put Desmond and Gossgus in the stocks, he little thought that they would be carried away by a giraffe. But members that it wants a drink and stoops he does not purpose to stand idly by and see them get off so easily, so he mounts a horse and starts in pursuit. Desmond Gossgus are locked in, they go with it. It very well, anyhow, they come to get the nuts through the framework of the pillory, but they are unable to get their mouths.

The monkeys up in the tree tops can't resist making a target of them, and immediately begin to throw cocoanuts. Now crocodiles are extremely fond of cocoanuts, as you undoubtedly know—or don't know, and two of them try to get the nuts through the framework of the pillory, but they are unable to get their mouths.

So they make another attempt, and this time they are more successful. They open their mighty jaws over the end pieces of the stocks in such a way that they can't possibly miss the nuts, and yet you will find people who consider the crocodile a stupid beast, just because he's homely. You can't always judge by appearances.

When the gigantic anurians close their jaws to crack the cocoanuts, they also crush the framework of the stocks, thereby releasing Desmond and Gossgus from imprisonment. It's a pity that something always happens to save those two crooks from getting their just deserts, but don't blame us. We merely picture life as it is.

In the meantime, Claude and Rosamond are crossing the stream on an improvised bridge, consisting of one dinky little log. Just as they reach the middle, Desmond and Gossgus appear at one end of the log and a bunch of wild men at the other. Is there no escape for our hero and heroine? We shall see—is to-morrow's pictures.

Epigrams and Sayings

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

INGRATITUDE on the part of my friend wounds me scarcely more than to detect in him a hasty desire to repay me for some material favor I have bestowed out of pure affection. Such a spirit turns friendship into a mere money exchange, and renders kindness a matter of bargain and sale.

When we cease to feel the neglect of one we love, we begin not to love. Many a man congratulates himself upon the fact that his wife is "becoming more sensible" when she is really becoming indifferent.

I think the most cruel judgments in the world come from the women who resent never having been tempted themselves.

All beauty is a record of truth and harmony in a past incarnation. If it appears those qualities in this life, it may expect deformity and discord in the life next.

Men boast of their infidelities; women conceal them.

No soul ever transgressed a divine law without injuring some innocent being. There is no absolute individuality. We are bound hand and lashed together by invisible cords of indissoluble threads, upon down from Under- bit a be Great Source. When any man attempts to exiricate himself he but more hopelessly interlaces and snarls the network which unites us all.

The term "ladies' man" always suggests a frivolous nature, something even more intolerable in a man than in a woman.

Loneliest is an all-pervading consciousness of self.

Many an over-zealous reformer imagines he is teaching morality when he is really giving instructions in vice. It is dangerous to describe an evil too closely in order to warn against it. I have seen hell so warmly depicted on canvas that a shivering beggar drew near it fascinated, unmindful of the cold church edifice opposite.

Were it not seeming blasphemy, I should like to improve upon the Bible injunction, "Ask and ye shall receive," in this wise: "Ask for others and ye shall receive for yourselves." For this truth I am certain, the more utterly forgetful we are of our own needs in our anxiety for others—not in mere actions, but in our deepest hearts—the more we are remembered and cared for by divine forces.

It often seems in this world, when a soul is floundering in a network of sins weaving, striving to extricate itself, that the devil, like a great spider, comes along and spins new meshes about it.

Those who belong to each other spiritually will find each other and dwell together through eternities of love.

The most unfortunate being is he who has no one dependent upon him for support. However poor such a man may be, he is wise if he takes a cat, a dog, or a blind beggar to care for, in order that he may get out of himself.

Nothing flatters a man's vanity so much as being told he is not like other men.

It is better to believe in an error than in nothing.

When we ask for long life we ask to weep over many biers.

If there had been no God originally, the devout belief of billions of souls in His existence would long ago have called Him into being. How curious, then, if instead of God creating man, man created God.

As malice creates malice, so often generosity arouses generosity.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

Lysander John Has to Give Way to Women on Wardrobe Question

SPRING, on her annual visit to the world, waves a magic wand, and all that was gray and desolate bursts into life and bloom.

She spreads a bright carpet of flowers for the children, she renews the blossoms of Mother Earth's old bonnet, making the wrinkled face under it look youthful again; she waves a magic wand and a fairy-like transformation results, everything showing quick response to her touch but the boarding house table and Lysander John Appleton's wardrobe. Spring has no power there.

The boarding house table—that's another story; but the reason Spring never reaches Lysander John's wardrobe is that Daysey Mayme and her mother get to the oddess of the season first, and rob her of it that is coming to the Appleton family.

When a woman is too modest to boast of the number of dresses she is having made she covers the ground by relating that she had to spend so much time being fitted by a dressmaker she fainted from exhaustion.

In having her Spring clothes made Daysey Mayme fainted seventeen times. The women may figure for themselves statisticians having failed to handle the situation) how many hours are represented by seventeen faints and how many garments are represented in the result in hours.

But clothes are not the only preparations Daysey Mayme is making. She is spending some time every day, standing on the arm of a rocking chair, in violent motion, while she does her hair. She is learning how to hold seventeen hairpins, the ends of six switches and a comb in her teeth and still carry on a conversation.

She has learned to powder her nose without getting powder in it, while swaying violently before one inch of mirror; she has become an adept in keeping one eye on her back hair and the other on her corset hung over the water cooler so that no one will steal it.

She has become such a contortionist she can button her dress down the back with her own hand, holding a buttonhook with the other to keep from being knocked to the floor, and she can lace her shoes standing up.

All these and more, Daysey Mayme Appleton has taught herself, for she is going on a trip, and more important than command of guide books is the ability to dress with seventeen other women in a two by three Pullman dressing room.

The De Bercy Affair

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS

MADEMOISELLE DE BERCY, a young woman of great beauty, has been slain in her rich apartments in the Feldman Mansions. Rupert Osborne, her wealthy American suitor, is believed by all London to be the murderer. Inspector Winter, however, believes him innocent and advises him to hide in Tormouth, a seaside village.

Furneaux, the great detective, is unaccountably aggrieved when assigned to the case, and his chief, Inspector Winter, resolves to watch him.

Furneaux learns from Hylda Prout, Osborne's secretary, that a dagger and arrowhead, like the one used to kill Miss De Bercy, were missing from the private museum immediately after the murder.

Winter, tracking Furneaux, bids his own subordinate, learns that he was in Osborne's house and in the museum the very day of the murder.

Detective Clarge finds a letter which tells how Mlle. De Bercy was marked for death as a traitress by the anarchist society.

Chief Winter learns a new thing from the murdered woman's desk: Furneaux was quarreling with Miss De Bercy a short time previous to the crime.

Furneaux goes to Tormouth, finds Osborne is posing as Mr. Glyn, breaks into his room and discovers a letter which shows he is deeply in love with Rosalind Marsh, a girl he met on the boat.

He gets Hylda Prout, whom he knows is in love with Osborne, to come to Tormouth. Her jealousy aroused, she writes Rosalind a letter which makes her act coldly toward Osborne. The letter, packing his bag, comes across a blood-stained bit of lace. He throws it out of the window and then, feeling that he has made a mistake, hastens out after it. It is restored to him by an Italian, who had picked it up. The Italian later tells Hylda that he himself put the lace in Osborne's bag.

The next day Osborne starts for London, as does Rosalind and her mother. Hylda, seeing them, hurries to follow, and the Italian says he will go also.

Back to London

AT this time Furneaux was already at the station, awaiting the train, having already wired to Winter in London to meet him at Waterloo. And so the same train carried all their various thoughts and purposes and secrets in its different compartments on the Londonward journey.

Furneaux, who chose to sit in the compartment with Rosalind and Mrs. Marsh, listened to every sigh and syllable of Rosalind, and, with the privilege of the aged, addressed some remarks to his fellow-travelers.

Hylda Prout and the Italian were together—a singular bond of intimacy having suddenly forged itself between the two. They were alone, and Hylda, who left Tormouth old and iron-gray, arrived at London red-headed and young, freckle-splashed and pretty.

But as for Osborne, he traveled in the dull company of his black thoughts.

The first to alight at Waterloo, before the train stopped, was Furneaux. His searching eyes at once discovered Winter waiting on the platform. In a moment the chief inspector had a wizened old man at his ear, saying: "Winter—I'm here. Came with the crowd."

"Hallo," said Winter, and from old-time habit of friendship his hand half went out. Furneaux, however, seemed not to notice the action, and Winters hand drew back.

"Osborne is in the train," whispered Furneaux. "I telegraphed because there is an object in his smaller bag that I want you to see—as a witness, instantly. There he comes; ask him into the first-class waiting room. It is usually empty."

Furneaux himself went straight into the waiting room and sat in a corner behind a newspaper. Soon in came Winter, talking to Osborne with a marked deference:

"You will forgive me, I am sure, for this apparent lack of confidence, but in an affair of this sort one leaves no stone unturned.

"Do not mention it," said Osborne, who was rather pale. "I can't even guess what it is that you wish to see."

A porter, who had followed them, put the two portmanteaus on a table, and went out. Osborne opened the smaller one, and Winter promptly had the blood-stained bit of lace in his hand.

"What is it, sir?" asked Winter.

"Heaven knows," came the weary answer. "It was not in my possession when I left London, and was put into one of my bags by someone at Tormouth. When I found it, I threw it out of the window, as that gentleman there can prove," for he had seen Furneaux, but was too jaded to give the least thought to his unaccountable presence. "Afterwards I ran down and recovered it. He was in the garden."

Winter's Lips Whitened

The unhappy young man's glance wandered out of the door to see Rosalind and her mother go past toward a waiting cab. He cared not a jot if all Scotland Yard were dogging his footsteps now.

"Is that so, sir?" asked Winter of Furneaux.

"Exactly as Mr. Glyn says," answered Furneaux, looking at them furtively, and darting one very curious glance at Winter's face.

"And who, Mr.— Glyn, was about the place whom you could possibly suspect of having placed this object in your bag—someone with a wicked motive for throwing suspicion upon you?"

Winter's lips whitened and dwelt with venom upon the word "wicked."

"There was nobody in one," answered Osborne. "The hotel was rather empty. Of course, there was this gentleman——"

"Yes," said Winter after him. "this gentleman."

"An elderly lady, a Mrs. Forbes, I believe, as I happened to read her name on a foreigner who probably never saw me before, an invalid girl and her sister—all absolutely unconnected with me."

Furneaux's eyes, which were glued on Winter's face. They seemed to have a queer meaning in them, a meaning not wholly devoid of spite and malice.

"Well, Mr. Glyn," said Winter, "let me tell you, if you do not know, that this bit of lace was certainly part of the dress in which Miss de Bercy was murdered. Therefore the man—or woman—who put it into your bag was there—on the spot—when the deed was done."

Osborne did then exhibit some perplexed interest in a strange discovery.

"How can you be certain that it was part of her dress?" he asked.

"Because a fragment of lace of this size was torn from the wrap she was wearing at the time of the murder—I noticed it at my first sight of the body. This piece would just fit into it. So, whoever put it into your bag——"

"In that case I may have put it in myself?" said Osborne with a nervous laugh, "since I may be the murderer."

"Apparently the careless comment annoyed Winter.

"I don't think I need detain you any longer, sir," he said coldly. "As for the lace, I'll keep it. I feel very confident that this part of the mystery will not baffle me for more than a day or two."

And over the eyes of Furneaux dwelt upon Winter's face with that queer meaning reveling in their underlook.

Osborne turned to go. He did not trouble to call another porter, but carried his own luggage. He was about to enter a cab when he caught sight of the back of a woman's head among the crowd hurrying to an exit, a head which seemed singularly familiar to him.

The next moment it was gone from his sight, which was a pity, since the head belonged to Hylda Prout, who had not anticipated that Osborne would be delayed on the platform, and had had to steal past the waiting room door at a rush, since she was no longer an old lady, but herself. She could not wait to the train till he was well away, for she thought it well to ascertain the whereabouts of Rosalind Marsh in London, and wished to shadow her.

A Third Detective.

Mrs. Marsh and her daughter carried the usual mountain of ladies' luggage, which demanded time and care in stowing safely on the roof of a four-wheeler, so Hylda Prout was in time to call a hansom and follow them. After her went the Italian, who made off hastily when the train arrived, but lurked about until he could follow the girl unseen, for she had frightened him.

Now, at the station that day, keeping well in the background, was a third detective besides Winter and Furneaux.

Clarke, with his interest in Anarchists, knew that this particular Italian was coming from Tormouth either that day or the day after. Two nights before, while on a visit to the Fraternal Club in Soho, he had overheard the whispered word that "Antonio" would "be back" on the Wednesday or the Thursday.

Clarke did not know Antonio's particular retreat in London, and had strong reasons for wishing to know it. He, therefore, followed in a cab the cab that followed Rosalind's cab.

In any other city in the world than London such a procession would excite comment—if it passed through street after street, that is. But not so in cab-ridden London, where a string of a hundred taxis, hansoms, and four-wheelers may all be going in the same direction simultaneously.

As Clarke went westward down the Strand and across Trafalgar square, he was full of meditations

"What in Antonio doing with Osborne's late secretary?" he asked himself. "For that is the young woman he is after, I'll swear. By Jove, there's more in this tangle than meets the eye. It's a case for keeping both eyes, and a third, if I had it, wide, wide open."

Rosalind's and Mrs. Marsh's cab drew up before a house in Porchester Gardens. As they got out and went up the steps, the cabs containing Antonio and Hylda Prout almost stopped, but each went on again

"Now, what in the world is the matter?" mused Clarke. "Why are those two shadowing a couple of ladies, and speaking on each other as well?"

He told his own striver to pass the house slowly, as he wished to note its number, and the vehicle was exactly opposite the front door when it was opened by a girl with a cap on her head to let in Mrs. Marsh and Rosalind; Clarke's eye rested on her, and fit with a strange fire.

A cry of discovery leapt to his lips, but was not uttered. A moment after the door had closed upon the two travelers, Clarke's hand was at the trap-door in the roof of the hansom, and, careless whether or not he was seen, he leaped out, ran up the steps and rang.

The Same Girl

A moment later and the door was opened to him by the same girl, whom he had recognized instantly as Pauline Dessuix, the late landlady of Rose de Bercy—a girl for whom he had ransacked London in vain. And not be alone, for Pauline had very effectively buried herself from the afternoon after the murder, when Clarke had seen her once, and she him, to this moment. And there now they stood, Clarke and Pauline, face to face.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

How It Happened

"I PUT a new man to work the other day," said a well-known contractor to a party of his friends, "and left him in charge of the foreman. He was a class of work the man wasn't exactly used to, but I thought he would make out all right. After having been him safely started, I visited another job and on returning met John limping away. "Where are you going?" I asked him

"I got hurted and am going home for the rest of the day," he replied.

"I asked him what happened, and he gave me his version of the accident as follows:

"I put me foot on a plank and the plank wasn't there, then me and the plank fell down together and the plank broke me leg."

A Turk and a Bachelor on American Wives

By ADA PATTERSON

THE Grand Turk has told me what he thinks of American wives.

A Grand Turk he is indeed, for he has forty-two wives in Constantinople. He is a merchant who lives and makes money in America for ten months of the year and visits his wives the other two months. He told me that he is very happy with his forty-odd spouses, all of whom he loves as well as any one of them. It is only the difficulties of transit and the atrocious expense of life in this country that separate him from his four times ten and two thrown in for good measure.

"The Turkish women are the best wives in the world," said this husband of fullness and many others. "They are the happiest."

"Happier than American wives?"

He flung up his hands at my question. "Happy! you laugh, dau you not? This is the land of bitter-faced wives." Nor could I move him from this startling position.

"In other countries it is the unmarried women who have the bitter faces," he insisted. "Here it is they who have handsome who look as though they had a regret with the whole world. I think it is because they know all about their husbands' business, and they worry about it. The husband comes home after a day of business when he has done his best, and he doesn't want to think about business. He is met by a woman with a drooping mouth, who asks him what he did at the office today and why he didn't do it some other and better way. A Turkish woman knows and cares nothing about business. She meets him with a laugh of welcome, or she flings her arms about his neck and says, 'Poor dear, you are very tired. Rest here while I bring you some coffee.'"

Of course he was a Turk, but his words were like an echo of what I heard no American bachelor say by way of a sufficient reason for not marrying.

"Wives are workmates," he said, "and a fellow wants a playmate."

We learn by criticism, even unjust criticism, and perhaps we would better not dismiss the opinion of the many pity Turkish husband and the contented American bachelor as entirely false. Hasn't serious worry become a too-confirmed habit with many American women?

Wifehood and care are synonyms. The wife of the poor man worries about "What shall we eat, what shall we drink and wherewithal shall we be clothed?"

The rich man's wife worries because she fears the crowd of women she believes are in pursuit of her husband because of his wealth.

Both are serious subjects, and every wife should give them thoughtful attention. But—and this is the criticism of the Grand Turk and of the unconvertible bachelor—she permits herself to fall into the habit of thinking constantly on them. Worry becomes a continual performance. Follow the bitter face, the significant drooping mouth.

Why not think it over, decide how to meet the trouble she thinks she sees stalking toward her, then close that drawer in the many compartmented cabinet of her mind and draw out another? If she thinks of some bigger problem, some world-wide one mankind is trying to solve, her own will be dwarfed for the time, or if she resolutely turns her thought more upon the beauty, and less upon the duty, of life, the bitterness may pass from her face. Her lips may resume their normal curve.

It is the haunting, dominating thought that stamps the face. Change the thought and the expression of the face will follow.

Men have a housecase side, if their wives do not discover and sympathize with it some other woman will.

The New-Born Year

I SAW the thorn in bloom to-day
And heard the cuckoo sing;
I picked a flower by the way,
A lovely wild-wood thing.

I watched the lark new-won his mate,
Young corn was growing earth;
Green gorse had donned its golden state,
The heath put on fresh worth.

Resurgent Nature, phoenix-wise,
From her gray ashes springs,
And flaunts the glory of yon skies
The verse I sing she sings.

And what have I amid such bliss?
Some wounds half hid by scars,
The failure of success, and this—
Some traffic with the stars.

Knew Them

A DRIED-UP old colonel said a very sentimental young lady wants to get watching the sea set.

She inquired gushingly, "Oh, Colonel, don't you love Longfellow's poems?"

"Can't say I do," he replied. "Never read them, in fact. Consider all poetry absolutely drivel."

"But," she persisted, "surely you cannot help admiring this verse of his out of 'The Day Is Done,' you know:

"And all the night shall be filled with music,
And the cares which infest the day
Shall fold their tents like the Arabs,
And as silently steal away."

"By Jove!" he exclaimed, "there is something in that. I know those Arab beggars—they would simply steal anything."

Stewed Chicken

A creamy sauce adds greatly to this dish, which is a general favorite. Borden's Evaporated Milk adds richness and rare flavor and makes the sauce almost a delightful dish by itself. There is economy in its use.

RECIPE

Cut the chicken into small pieces, put them in a stew-pan, partly cover with boiling water and simmer until quite tender; when nearly done add a teaspoonful salt. Dish. Moisten two tablespoonfuls flour with a little cold water, and stir it into the chicken liquor until it begins to boil. Now add salt and pepper to taste, and five tablespoonfuls Borden's Evaporated Milk diluted with one-fourth of a cup of water. Take it from the fire, add the yolk of one egg well beaten, pour it over the chicken, and serve.

"RED ROSE" A RIOT OF SONG AND COLOR

Valeska Suratt Comes as a Star to the Tremont with an Excellent Cast.

"The Red Rose," in which Valeska Suratt came as a star to the Tremont last night, is no place for people with weak eyes. Such persons should provide themselves with smoked glasses.

The thing that stands out most vividly in memory after departing is the way in which the optics were dazzled, strained and blinded by riotous splashing of color, both in the costumes and the settings.

There was a big audience. Valeska Suratt has a reputation for being naughty and everybody wanted to see the show before it was censored. The censors were there, down in front seats, and when the curtain rose everybody held their breaths for the shock.

Stung again. There is nothing in the "Red Rose" to jolt the Old Ladies at City Hall. It is just an ordinary French farce that plenty of legs and bare arms and necks and naughty old American millionaire getting bunkoed by dashing Parisiennes.

As for Valeska, she behaved herself, although at times one could see that she was laboring under a strain.

Company Is First Class.

To make up for the disappointment of part of the audience, "The Red Rose" proceeded to be a very entertaining musical comedy, with much fun in it and any amount of lively music. Robin H. Bowers has put some of his best work into the score, which is full of attractive numbers, while Harry B. Smith and Robert B. Smith turned out a book that was bright and amusing.

Valeska Suratt had her luck with her in being surrounded by a first-class company, for although heralded as a star and costumed like a comet she shone blithely and vocally like a 10-candle-power electric light.

Whoever designs her costumes is a wonder. One man last night guessed that the designer lives in a lunatic asylum. Nothing quite so weird has been seen around these parts for some time. When the star first appeared in the artist's studio she looked like a sunset or a house on fire. She returned in a gown that made her look like a huge purple caterpillar, and as the play progressed and she came out in other amazing costumes, she answered the description of what opium fiends see in the smoke.

The plot is quickly told—long lost daughter an artist's model, became a baroness and married American artist. Two old American millionaires on a time in Paris caught by a moving picture machine. Alexander Clark, as the first American millionaire, was in his element, and provoked much laughter while John D. Murphy, as a very old millionaire, did an excellent piece of character acting. There was also John E. Hazzard and his German accent, and Flavie Arnaud, who played a maid, and Ernest Lambart as an English dude, and Carrie Reynolds as a holy terror. It was a clever company all right. And there were also the six English Hoschouds. The stage management was compared. Everything went with a bang and everything got over. The songs? Pretty soon you will be hearing "The Land of the Free," "The Queen of Fairy Fair," "Love and Beauty" and "Go as Far as You Like with Me." Valeska will probably be with us some time.

Alexander Clark and Valeska Suratt at the Tremont Theatre.

Castle Square.

The John Craig Stock Company was given unstinted applause and seventeen curtain calls for its performance of the ever-popular play, "A Gentleman From Mississippi," at the Castle Square Theatre last night.

Boston audiences need no special introduction to this distinctly American play, but the delicate manner in which its most critical situations are handled, the swiftness of its action, and the truth-to-life portrayal of its many-sided characters so presented by this popular stock company give it an added zest and a new meaning.

George Hassell, in the role of Senator William H. Langdon from Mississippi, was really clever. Of imposing stature and impressive appearance, he seems the real Southern gentleman, a man who would scorn a bribe while serving his State in high public office.

Donald Meek, as Bud Skinner of the New York Star, made a laughable type of news-paper man. His droll mannerisms were in such sharp contrast to those of the simple-minded Senator from Mississippi that the house was kept in continual good nature during the entire performance.

Miss Daley made a sweet, pretty heroine, while Miss Colcord, Messrs. Young, Murray and Roberts deserve special mention. The others included in the long cast contributed proportionately to the success of the performance.

Mr. Craig will present "Little Lord Fauntleroy" next week, with Henrietta McDonnell playing the principal character.

Majestic.

"The Weavers of Virginia," a romantic war play of the South, is the attraction at the Majestic Theatre this week by the Lindsay Morison Stock Company. The play has lost none of its charm with which audiences since it was seen a year ago when Miss Charlott Wallace appeared in the leading role at the same theatre. The story, which is well known to most audiences, is filled with emotions and is indeed appropriate for this week. It abounds in exciting climaxes and greatly appeals with its sweet romance and sunshine. The Morrison Stock Company is a strong one and its entire strength is utilized in the cast.

As Agatha Warren, Miss Eleanor Gordon won the applause of the large audience with her polished acting. As the old Southern gentleman, Wilson Reynolds did a thing that could be expected. Holding the honor of his country above everything, he gave an excellent portrayal of a typical Southerner during the civil war.

Other members of the cast whose admirable deserves praise are Augustin Fellows, Juliette Atkinson, Madeline Moore and little Danny Dolles.

Keith's.

Have you seen Little Billy? Where? At Keith's this week. Go and see the size of him. He is the smallest big man on the vaudeville stage to-day and he's getting a big one on the entire Keith bill. Just a little more of both would be nice in miniature, but with all that he finishes a thoroughly rotten. His song, sung in a voice as small as himself, and good, is entitled "A Wee Dutch Laddie." His eccentric talent and toe dancing is clever.

"A Little Bit of Everything," a whirlwind sketch in two scenes by Edgar Allan Woolf, Louis Meyers and Bert Lyons appear, is a real classy and there is something doing every minute.

Thomas J. Ryan, Miss Calhoun and Mr. Fanning are a scream in "Mug Haggerty, Osteopath," with Mr. Ryan's talent well to the fore. The jolliest scene, in which Mike Haggerty is fleeced out of a fortune by a sharper, is one of the richest things in the bill.

Carle Stowe, formerly Cadet show star, scores many a laugh with his monologue, while Frankie Carpenter, Jere Grady and Lawrence C. Kemp are fine in "The Butterfly." The rest of the bill worthy. It is made up of the Aerial Smiths, Pauline Walsh, Hill, Cherry and Hill, the Guatemalan Marimba Band and the motion pictures.

Testimonial Date Changed.

As this will be the last week of "The Kiss Waltz" at the Shubert Theatre, it has been decided to change the date of the testimonial to be tendered Manager E. D. Smith of the Shubert and Majestic theatres from next Monday evening to Thursday evening of this week. Although Mr. Smith has been the resident manager of the Majestic Theatre for a number of years, and has served in the same capacity at the Shubert since its opening, this will be the first testimonial company and the Messrs. Shubert head the list of prominent Boston and vicinity men who will join in this substantial demonstration of the high esteem in which Manager Smith is held.

Friars' Frolic.

The talent that will be enlisted for the Friars' Frolic, to be given at the Boston Theatre on June 1, will include many of the best-known players on the American stage. The Friars will be here for one night. The nature of the performance only, and the nature of the entertainment they will give guarantees a crowded house.

Hub Theatre.

"The Krazy Kids," who headed the bill at the Hub Theatre yesterday, made good from the start. Other pleasing features were on the program.

Orpheum Theatre.

There was class to the art furnished by Lorimer Johnson and Caroline Frances Cooke at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday. It was called "After the Ball" and was worthy of its position at the top of the bill. The balance of the program contained lively vaudeville specialties and new motion pictures.

Globe Theatre.

One of the shartest and most sensational shooting acts ever seen in vaudeville was presented at the Globe yesterday by the Schillings, Carl and Ada, who displayed a few new tricks in marksmanship. The act was easily the hit of the bill. There were a number of other novelties on the program and a long list of new motion pictures.

Howard Athenaeum.

Pat White and his Gaiety Girls are still at the Old Howard, where they began a new week yesterday, giving a show that kept the girls on the stage during most of the argument. Besides the burlesque there was a long list of special vaudeville features.

New Palace Theatre.

The new program at the Palace Theatre yesterday was headed by "A Busy Day," a lively sketch, in which nine merry people took part. Another attractive feature was supplied by the Dorans sisters. The entire vaudeville section was entertaining and the picture program was inviting.

Waldron's Casino.

"The Ginger Girls" supplied the burlesque entertainment at Waldron's Casino Theatre yesterday. Ed Lee Wrothe was the chief comedian, and he managed to keep the fun moving. The burlesque was embellished with spirited vaudeville.

Gaiety Theatre.

The Gaiety Theatre is finding prosperity in its season of vaudeville which has started brilliantly. The new show yesterday was headed by the Georgia Trio, singers of quality. The picture program was interesting.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

"The Girl of Mystery" was the feature of the new show at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday. There were pictures, too.

Scenic Temple.

New musical selections, several high-class vaudeville features and a long list of instructive motion pictures made up the bill at the Scenic Temple yesterday.

Austin & Stone's.

The performing bears at Austin & Stone's Museum gave an astonishing act yesterday. A new show was presented in both the curio hall and the theatre.

Norumbega Park.

The season at Norumbega Park is fairly started and indications point to several months of unexampled prosperity. The new features are attracting visitors from every direction, who also find that the open air theatre is more suited to summer entertainment than most places. The new program in the theatre yesterday comprised several vaudeville novelties of attractive character.

Lexington Park.

Lexington Park was opened for the season and is receiving considerable attention to-day. A lively vaudeville show is given in the theatre.

Bass Point.

Already the seekers of cool and refreshing recreation are turning toward Bass Point and Nahant, where many new features have been added to coax the city men away from paved streets. The regular Summer schedule on the steamboat line has been resumed.

Plays That Remain.

"The Kiss Waltz" began its second week at the Shubert last night. Miss Christine Nielson is now in the cast.

The record engagement of the year has been made by "The Commuters" at the Park, which is now in its fifteenth week. "Dr. De Luxe," which began its second week at the Colonial last evening, announces that holds its own as a lively Summer show.

Next Week's Plays.

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" will be the attraction at the Castle Square Theatre next week. It will also mark the return of Mrs. Henrietta McDannel to the Castle Square company.

The Lindsay Morison company, at the Majestic Theatre, will present "A Chorus Lady" as next week's play. It has never been seen here in stock.

The business man whose family is to be "away for the Summer" will enjoy the cool delight of dining in the Venetian Room. The Summer menus are made especially attractive by the fresh products of our farm.

Most Naturally, England Controls the Telegraph Situation — for England Has Brains Enough to Own a GOVERNMENT TELEGRAPH SYSTEM

England Also Controls the Postal Situation—FOR ENGLAND HAS A PARCELS POST.

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner.

Here is an extract from a letter which we received from Mr. Lee Sellers:

Of course you have noticed the tremendous strides made by the Western Union Telegraph Company since its acquisition by the Bell Telephone Company. The latest is the combination announced in the papers regarding the merging of the Western Union cables with those owned and controlled by the English government. This, of course, is an effort to crush out the cable business of the Mackay companies.

One feature about this consolidation struck me as peculiarly galling to the patriotism of a citizen of the United States. The fixing of rates, which practically means the control of the situation, is vested in the hands of the postmaster-general of Great Britain.

Things have come to a pretty pass when an official of the British government is given control of the most important connections between this country and abroad—connections on which depend to a large degree the importance and value of the enormous wire mileage of our biggest telegraph company.

The Western Union Telegraph Company and all the telephones of America—excepting the automatic telephone system—are in the hands of one company. And that company is in the hands of Theodore N. Vail, a very powerful individual and a very unusual character.

If Mr. Vail has made a combination with the English government, giving the Western Union practically a monopoly of the wiring under the ocean—that is a very good thing for Mr. Vail's monopoly and a very bad thing for such competition as exists.

But neither Mr. Sellers nor any other citizen need be surprised to find that in such a combination the English government has the real power.

Naturally, when you have a corporation made up only of money and a few able men, dealing with a great foreign government, the big government will have the power.

You may be sure that if this country were run as it should be run, if our government owned its telegraph lines as the British government owns the British telegraph lines, in any combination of cables and wires between England and America—ENGLAND WOULDN'T BE THE BOSS OF THE SITUATION.

In any combination existing now England, of course, will rule, since a powerful government, managing its telegraph system unselfishly for the benefit of its citizens, is naturally and properly infinitely superior to a private corporation, managing the whole telegraph and telephone system of a nation for selfish interests.

The dominant position of Great Britain is not alone confined to the telegraph system by any means. It extends to the postal service.

How many of our citizens know that an Englishman can send a package weighing six pounds from London to Chicago for less than half the amount that the American citizen must pay to send the same package from Boston to Chicago?

The English government, owning the postoffice, having brains enough to make the postoffice the servant of the people, not permitting private express companies to dominate, has established a parcels post which gives the cheapest possible service, stimulating industry and business and obliging the people.

And an English citizen sending a parcel to the United States can send that parcel, using OUR postoffice facilities and OUR railroads, four thousand miles for less than the price charged by our private express companies on a twelve-hundred-mile journey between Boston and Chicago.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

DEFENDS RED HEADS

Editor AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Your recent editorial concerning our brethren of the flaming locks reminds me of the following story which a red-headed friend of mine used to tell:

A red-headed man once asked a notorious grocer whose hairs were no longer numbering whether the unbroken expanse of shining poll which he had attained had been caused by illness or whether it was simply due to its possessor's natural inaptitude along the line of hair-growing.

"My hair was red," came the amiable reply, "and it pulled it out."

It strikes me, however, that those persons whose attitude toward another is determined by the color of his or her hair show a pathetic lack of something beneath their own hair, be it ever so romantically soon. Fortunate, indeed, is the red-haired one that can easily escape the onus of familiar association with people of their caliber. Their society are more to be desired than would be their overtures, and it has been my observation that red-headed people usually have brains enough to know it.

Please pass the joke.

KEEP UP SUFFRAGE FIGHT

Editor AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—In my opinion, you have done more for woman suffrage than all the rest of the papers combined. I see the AMERICAN everywhere, and you have made people think. Keep up the good work. Give us your opinion on every subject of the day, and don't be afraid to put in strong and effective language.

Yours truly,

A HOP PILLOW FOR INSOMNIA

Editor AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—To any of your readers who suffer from loss of sleep and its attendant evils I would say: Have you tried sleeping on hop pillows?

Some time ago I was very greatly troubled with insomnia and wasted to a mere shadow; I slept but a few hours at night, and then from sheer exhaustion. My appetite was very poor and I was very nervous. Various remedies were brought into play, such as automobile trips, ocean voyages, long walks at night, etc., but all in vain, when at last I got a hop pillow which brought the long-sought-for relief. But I would say that only the choice hops should be used. I know from experience that persons in poor health working in the hop fields during the hop picking season would in a few days get well and grow fat.

Trusting this suggestion may bring some relief to others, I remain, I write it with the hope that it will do some good.

RETURNING TO BICYCLES

Editor AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Judging by the many men and women I have seen riding bicycles this spring it would seem that the "bicycle craze" of '96 is about to return.

From the standpoint of a physician, I want to commend the return of this healthy, wholesome, outdoor sport. It will mean an increase in the average standard of health among the people. All medical authorities agreed years ago that bicycle riding was a certain cure for many ills of the human family.

Bicycle riding comes very near to being the ideal sport. Being indulged in outdoors, it brings into play nearly every fibre and muscle of the body, and so strengthens the body that it is enabled to throw off diseases without the use of drugs of any kind.

The people are to be congratulated upon the return to popularity of the healthy sport of bicycle riding.

Yours truly,

MEDICO.

TELLS OF INJUSTICE

Editor AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I wish to take a few minutes of your time and tell you of my ill luck. For the past eleven years I have worked for one firm. I took active interest in the work, did everything that was possible; if a rush was on, I worked early and late in order to help in every way. If I had a few minutes to spare from my own task, I then helped those others. Surely I ought to merit success, but one evening I was taken ill. That night the doctor had to make two visits to me, and it was utterly impossible for me to go to work the following morning. A lady telephoned my employer telling him of my illness and he sent word that I need not come any more. Was this just? Should I lose my position through circumstances over which I have no control? You are at liberty to publish this letter.

Respectfully yours,

UNFORTUNATE.

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE

TAFT, THE PRESIDENT WITH POISE

DR. PARKHURST

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

ALL Americans, of whatever political complexion, must rejoice in the days of Mexican disturbance that executive authority has been vested in the person of a man of such poise of mind and such quiet, tempered conservatism as Mr. Taft.

The country is learning to know him, and the varied relations into which he is brought toward steering conditions, national and international, are teaching us new lessons from month to month as to the steadiness of his thought and the statesmanly breadth of his comprehension.

In the ripening of pacific sentiment the time had come when it was opportune to project a proposition looking to unconditional arbitration. Mr. Taft recognized that the psychological moment had arrived and projected the proposition, and the English-speaking world has risen to meet it, and a situation is thereby secured which promises to create in human history an epoch of almost unprecedented moment.

The composed dignity of the man has communicated force to a movement which was already in itself sufficiently appealing to command the respect of peace-loving people.

And now that is succeeded by the attitude, considerate and magisterial, which he has maintained toward Mexico. His very earnestness but quietness of purpose establishes our confidence in his judgment, and even in the presence of possible national difficulties the people are composed by his composure and restrained by his self-restraint.

The Necessity for a President Who Has Poise

This circumstance ought to instruct us in the lesson of a nation's necessity to put itself under the direction of a Chief Executive who can face a crisis without being perturbed, and, therefore, without throwing the people into a state of perturbation.

The unruffled dignity of a President morris chair, I am deeply grateful for the honor which has been heeped upon me. I will ask you all to keep silence while each member in turn says a new Daffydill. We will first hear from our dear hostess, & this was the Daffydill wich Ma sed:

If the Amazon flows to the sea, where does Congo?

Then everybody sed grate excep Pa. He dident say a word, be just looked kind of pale.

We will now hear from Mrs. White, sed the queen, & this is the one wich Misses White sed.

If Ethel scorned to be a shop gurl, cud Wannamaker?

Then sed everybody except Pa. He was gitting witer all the time. Bobbie, Pa whispered to me, if this keeps on very long I shall go mad. I wonder how many hour they are goin to pull.

Now, sed the queen, we will hear from Missus Jackson. She is one of our hetest scholars, & I know you will all be glad to heer from her, & this is what Missus Jackson sed for her Daffydill:

If Georgia needed her skirt changed, how wud Nantucket?

Bobbie, sed Pa, did you ever hear about the bob that cums into the eyes of a wounded deer? Then look at my lamps, sed Pa.

We will now hear from our geeeyral host, sed the queen. I am sure we all want to heer from him. So Pa got up & cleered his throte & sed:

If James J. Corbett is slim, why is Kid Broad?

Then Pa gave a loud yell & dashed thru the door.

Will Announce Boston Congressmen

Advertisements were withdrawn from newspapers that appealed for a more liberal construction of the tariff laws. One dealer even went so far as to put a man on the clock to watch new arrivals and their baggage, and see that no dutiable goods slipped through the sieve of customs inspection.

Mr. O'Shaughnessy, the mover of the bill, writes as follows: "Petitions to Congress for its passage would help materially. Many good measures die because of public apathy."

The matter in question is not one in regard to which certainly the travelling public is apathetic, and it can doubtless be relied upon to send letters of support either to Mr. O'Shaughnessy or to its own congressmen.

When You Invite a Guest

By KENNETT HARRIS

WE have a guest room in the house; its ceiling doesn't leak,
As I inform my gentle spouse when I'm allowed to speak.
Its bed appears to me all right, it seems designed for rest,
And so I really think it might accommodate a guest.

We have a pantry full of shelves, the shelves are full of food,
Far more than we could eat ourselves, and most of it is good.
And there's a cook-stove, I contend, whatever she may say,
So we could always feed a friend. At least it looks that way.

I haven't noticed that we're shy of spoons or forks or knives.
We've plates in plenty, too; as I inform The Best Of Wives.
We've chairs in which a man can sit, as can be clearly shown.
So where's the need to throw a fit because I failed to phone.

Smith didn't really come to see a lot of frill and fuss;
He came to spend the night with me—or, I should say, with us.
He wished to have a cosy chat and smoke, unless I'm wrong.
I knew that I could give him that, so brought him right along.

I didn't have a proper pride, I didn't have much sense.
I might have warned her if I tried, but men are always dense.
The house just looking like distress, the maid's back hair unneat,
And She in that old tacky dress, and not a thing to eat!

Oh, well, next time I meet a chum, a friend both close and dear,
I'll ask that good old pal to com e and dine with us next year.
I'll hire a chef, I do not think, to cook us proper grub.
Or else I'll buy the man a drink and take him to the club.

He Wrties About The Daffydill Sisters

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

HUNBAND, sed Ma to Pa, when he cum home last nite, this is the last time that I am going to ask a Ladies' Club up to the house, & I hope you will let it go at this one time. I suppose I will have to stand for it, sed Pa. What is this parfickler bunch of youre club sisters?

It is called the Daffydill Sisters, sed Ma, they have been reading all them things wich Tad Fites, and all of them is making up Daffydills all the time.

After we had had our dinuer, Pa began to kid Ma about the party wich she was going to have. I bet that are a lot of witty old hens, sed Pa. I can jest imagine sum of the things they will sprig in the way of Daffydills. I suppos it will be a lot of things like if George Washington cud forge a horseshoe, what cud Valley Forge?

No, sed Ma, sum of them is awful cute little Daffydills. We have a queen of our party, too, sed Ma, in Miss Jones from Dayton, Ohio. She is going to ware a crown & set in the morris chair, & we are to be her subjects. You and Bobbie can be subjects, too, & we will have a grand evening.

Then a lot of ladies cum in & Pa was introduced to all of them. I am glad to meet you, ladies, sed Pa, & then he whispered to Ma, wich one is the queen, the big brunette? Yes, sed Ma. Then I know I am going to have a pleasant evening, sed Pa.

Now folks, sed Miss Jones, wen Ma had put the crown on her & led her to her throne, wich was the
